ANGLO-JAPANESE TENSION GROWING

Nipponese Attempt To Occupy Station In British Sector

SHANGHAI, June 17—British-Japanese tension grew taut here this afternoon when Japanese soldiers, with a squad of Chinese police, attempted to occupy a closed police station within the British defence sector at the western border of city.

The disputed station is admittedly within Chinese territory, but adjoins the settlement roadway, over which settlement authorities exercise authority, and consequently the British forces refused to permit occupancy by the Chinese-Japanese group.

The Chinese are members of the Japanese-dominated Tatao police. The British authorities ousted them last month and nailed shut the doors to the station.

They unexpectedly reappeared today. British soldiers dashed to the scene and the Chinese withdrew, but the Japanese remained and a prolonged and sharp verbal dispute ensued before they also withdrew.

The spot is adjacent to the international Country Club, where hundreds of foreigners were weekending.

British Exporter Is Under Arrest

TIENTSIN, June 17. — Tense Anglo-Japanese relations were aggravated today when Japanese soldiers arrested G. A. Smith, a British exporter, following an argument between him and a Chinese policeman outside the

MILLET MAN GETS AWARD SEED PARLEY

H. G. Young is Honored By Canadian Seed Growers' Association

Canadian Seed Growers' Association, at its convention in Victoria Friday, bestowed its highest award—the Robertson Associate Membership—on Henry G. Young, Millet, Alta., oat grower.

Born in Yorkshire, Eng., Mr. Young came to the Millet district in 1902. He farms three-quarter sections of land seven miles from Millet, specializing in registered banner oats since 1919. It is believed Mr. Young has the longest unbreakable record for growing registered seed in Alberta, having started 20 years ago. He has never gone in for showing the seed, being more interested in growing it.

Since 1925 Mr. Young has shipped an average of two carloads of seed grain per year to all parts of Canada.

Mr. Young was a director of the U.F.A. for seven years and was director of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association from 1935 to 1938. He is married and has three daughters.

Mr. Young expressed surprise when notified of the honor bestowed on him by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and was sorry that he was not able to attend the meeting of the association in Victoria. It is the first meeting he has missed in the past four years.

HOSPITAL TO PAY $650,000 FOR ADDITION

A $300,000 unit will be added to the General Hospital this year if permission is obtained from the city council to close the lane abutting the hospital building, it was learned in reliable sources Saturday.

Application will be made to the city commissioners in the near future seeking the passing of a bylaw to close the lane. If this concession is granted the parent order of the hospital will authorize the construction of the $300,000 unit which is part of a $650,000 extension plan to existing hospital facilities provided by the General hospital here.

Plans for the $650,000 extension have been under consideration for a lengthy period, and arrangements for financing are completed provided the necessary sanction to the closing of the lane is forthcoming, it was learned.

GROWERS ASK DELAY ACTION MARKET ACT

CALGARY, June 17—Delegates at the Western Stock Growers' Association Friday unanimously approved a resolution urging the Alberta government not to put section one of the Alberta Marketing act into force.

The resolution was passed despite assurances from Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial minister of trade and industry, that provisions of the act would not necessarily apply to livestock producers. Mr. Manning gave a detailed analysis of the marketing legislation.

Livestock men requested the government delay that part of the marketing act pertaining to marketing boards for industries until producers had an opportunity to study the act thoroughly and suggest possible changes.

McFarland's Unity Demands Not On Liberal Agenda

Brief Informal Meeting Of Executive At Red Deer Limits Itself To Concluding Routine Business

By Bulletin Staff Reporter

RED DEER, June 17.—First draft of the agenda to be placed before the Liberal Council Saturday afternoon by the party executive contained no references to the question of co-operation with the John I. McFarland Unity party. A brief informal meeting of the executive in St. Luke's Parish hall Friday night limited itself to concluding routine association business arising from the last executive meeting held May 1 in Edmonton. The executive met again Saturday morning to formulate resolutions for the party platform to be discussed by the council which meets in the afternoon.

Although at present the executive has defined no policy respecting the Unity question, that issue may still come up for debate if a discussion on it is started by a Council member. E. L. Gray, Liberal leader, was not present at Friday's executive discussions, the road from Brooks to Calgary was impassable, due to rain. He arrived in Red Deer by train early Saturday morning in time to attend all the Saturday meetings. He telegraphed the executive stating the reasons for his delay.

Robert Barrowman, Lethbridge, association president, left Calgary Friday at 4 p.m., but his car broke down, due to the soggy highway conditions, and he did not arrive till the executive meeting was almost over.

Telford Says Logical Thing for Chief Foster To Do Is Quit Post

VANCOUVER, June 17.—Mayor J. Lyle Telford said in a statement Friday that "the logical thing" for Chief Constable W. W. Foster to do is resign because results in the mayor's campaign to rid the city of vice "thus far are not satisfactory to me."

The mayor's statement was issued before the civic police commission began a meeting in the city hall—a meeting expected to deal with a report prepared by the mayor on the vice situation in Vancouver.

"The logical thing for Police Chief Foster to do is resign" the mayor's statement said. "He was given his chance. I have not interfered with the chief in his administration. In fact, I have taken every care that there was no interference.

GIVEN FREE HAND

"He knew what we wanted. He was given a free hand. Six months have passed. The results thus far are not satisfactory to me. I am positive that conditions can be improved, and very materially so, even under the present laws."

The mayor, who sits in the British Columbia legislature as independent member for Vancouver East, said that if the present vice situation in Vancouver continues, it will be "a sign of low-grade municipal administration."

CONTROL DIFFICULT

Brigadier Foster, meanwhile, prepared to submit to the commission a report stating that experience in cities with low-grade municipal administration" shows that control over vice is difficult.

"It is conversely easy to use vice as a method of attack on an efficient police force," the chief's report says. "Vancouver is recognized by those who understand law enforcement on this continent as having an efficient force. But it is obviously subject to attack under the guise of suppressing bootlegging and gambling."

71 MEN ARE LOST ABOARD FRENCH SUB

Death Is Certain In Undersea Craft Navy Report Says

SAIGON, French Indo-China, June 17.—An official French government communique said today 71 officers and sailors were lost aboard the French submarine Phenix, which disappeared on Thursday off Cam-Ranh naval base.

Death for the men whose number previously was given by officials as 63 was considered "certain," the communique said. The depth of the ocean and two days' failure to locate the submarine were advanced as reasons for lack of hope. Naval authorities calculated that the Phenix's air supply was exhausted today.

Flags of French naval units were at halfmast and the city went into formal mourning.

With other French units, the Phenix was engaged in manoeuvres in Cam-Ranh when it plunged and failed to reappear.

The communique said:

"On the morning of June 15, the submarines Phenix and Espoir took part in exercises off Cam-Ranh in collaboration with the Lamotte-Picquet (cruiser) and aviation.

"The Phenix having plunged did not reappear. Search was made immediately with the help of aviation but it was in vain.

"The bottom of the ocean at this point being more than 100 metres, after more than 24 hours of fruit-

ROYAL TRAIN RETURNS WITH DIGNITARIES

Tweedsmuirs and Premier King Arrive Back In Capital City

By THOMAS WAYLING

Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, June 17. — The Royal train, demoted to vice-regality, returned to the capital today, bringing the Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir, the Prime Minister, and their staff, from Halifax.

The pilot train preceded the Royal train as far as Montreal and there laid down its burden. The press, camera and radio men, by plane, train, motor and ship, dispersed—the great assignment finished.

The Prime Minister ended his arduous journey looking and feeling better than when he started. At the outset he was weary after the heavy session of parliament, but the trip did him good.

DIFFICULT JOURNEY

It was a difficult journey for him. He had his departmental and official work to carry on, and at the same time to give a hand on the innumerable details of the tour itself.

At each stop when The King and Queen descended from the back platform of the train, Mr. King had to be there to present the local dignitaries. His car was No. 3, so he had to get off and race the length of the other two cars before Their Majesties met the local receptionists.

Today the train crew have nothing but admiration for the Prime Minister and consider making a trainman of him. His

Their Majesties Make Final Stop In American Tour

By C. E. A. JEFFERY

Canadian Press Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 17—King George and Queen Elizabeth rode into the capital of their empire's oldest colony today to receive the homage and acclaim of Newfoundland on the last stop of their North American tour.

The Royal visitors rolled into this ancient capital in a motorcade from Holyrood, 26 miles away, at 10:00 a.m. E.D.T., after a 40-minute drive from that village on Conception Bay. The liner Empress of Britain, which brought them here from Halifax, entered the bay last night.

Smiling and acknowledging the cheers of the crowd with waves of the hand, the Queen wore a periwinkle blue dress with wool coat and hat to match. The King was garbed in the undress uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet.

The royal couple received their first official welcome from Newfoundland at Holyrood, where they landed at 8:50 a.m., E.D.T. After a brief reception on shore they boarded cars for the drive here across the Avalon Valley.

KING BROADCASTS

Five minutes after Their Majesties came to the gates of the city the King delivered a broadcast address from the entrance. He spoke with feeling of the economic reverses Newfoundland has suffered in the last few years, but expressed the hope times would change for the better.

"I well know," he said, "that in recent years Newfoundland, like other parts of the world, has suffered from a period of severe economic stress; but the qualities of courage and endurance which have never failed the people of this country in the past will, I am confident, enable them to more than surmount their difficulties."

His Majesty expressed his personal interest in the welfare of the

RIDING SHUFFLE FOR CABINET IS STATED LIKELY

Political observers Saturday saw possibility of shuffling of cabinet ministers' constituencies in the next provincial general election. Although the election date is still a matter of speculation, opinion is that the Dominion election will be toward the end of September and the provincial appeal will be about two weeks earlier.

A Social Credit members of the legislature caucus is likely before the legislature is dissolved and election writs issued.

It is rumored that Premier William Aberhart will not again run in Okotoks-High River, but will carry the Social Credit banner in Camrose, where Social Credit is reported very strong.

Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, who now sits for Calgary, is reported as being a likely Edmonton candidate.

Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture is another who is reported might change his constituency. He now sits for Edmonton.

In the event of his seeking a rural seat, Bruce, a new riding, including most of the former Sturgeon constituency territory, is considered his most likely field.

THREE BODIES LAKE VICTIMS ARE RECOVERED

Boat Brings Remains To Faust Friday—Inquest Is Planned

By E. S. STANLEY

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

FAUST, June 17.—With his boat containing the recovered bodies of the three men who were drowned in Lesser Slave Lake at midnight Tuesday, when flames enveloped their boat "Sheila M" drove them overboard, Jack Brillon, with four helpers, Joe Little, Harry Prilips, W. Anilette and Andy Washnick, pulled up to the fish dock at Faust at 5 p.m. Friday.

Victims of the tragedy were Louis Nome of Faust, Malcolm Sinclair of High Prairie and Claude Girouard of Codesa. There were seven men on board the boat when the fire broke out, the remaining four managing to hold on to wreckage in the icy water until help arrived. Survivors were George Davis, Frank Lalonde, Paul Laprette and Albert Laprette.

High winds Wednesday prevented immediate search for the bodies of the drowned men, but as soon as the wind had calmed sufficiently to enable the search to progress, Jack Brillon and his boat were engaged. They dragged the narrows all day Thursday without success.

Brillon, an old-time fisherman at Lesser Slave Lake, having been in the district since 1920, knows the lake well and on Friday morning again set out in an effort to recover the bodies of the victims.

Using rowboats and 250 feet of line with large fish-hooks, Brillon started dragging the lake bottom. Several pieces of wreckage were brought up early in the morning, and about 10 a.m. the body of Louis Nome was recovered some 75 yards from the scene of the tragedy. About two hours later the body of Malcolm Sinclair was recovered, and at 2:30 p.m. Friday the body of Claude Girouard of Codesa was pulled from the water.

Police at Kinuso were immediately notified and arrived on the scene shortly after. An inquest will probably be held.

NO SPECIFIC AUTHORITY FOR $350 ADVANCE

E.I.D. Inquiry At Brooks Adjourns Until Tuesday

By SAM G. ROSS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

BROOKS, Alta., June 17—Testimony there was no specific authority for an advance of $350 to the Bassano Creamery and Produce Company but that the advance was a matter of general authority, was given the Jackson inquiry into the Eastern Irrigation District affairs Friday.

Carl Anderson of Scandia, chairman of the E.I.D. trustees, said there was never any specific authority for the advance but that the trustees would have approved the action which had been taken by E. L. Gray, former manager of the E.I.D., Mr. Gray said there was no specific authority for the advance but that it came within general authority.

INQUIRY ADJOURNS

The inquiry adjourned until Tuesday after hearing evidence by Mr. Gray, Mr. Andersongn Christian Toppenburg, manager of the National Food Products Company, owners of the Bassano Creamery, Leonard Hansen, Bassano, employee of the food company. A statement also was made by William McLaws, Bassano, counsel for the E.I.D. trustees regarding formation of the Bassano Creamery and Produce Company which was dissolved when the creamery reverted to the National Food Company.

Mr. Gray was on the witness stand almost all afternoon and at the close of his evidence the second phase of the inquiry was concluded. The first phase was the Irrigation Development Land Company and the second the Bassano Creamery Company.

First contact with the National Food Products, Ltd., owners of the Bassano Creamery, came in July 1935 when a representative of the food company approached trustees of the E.I.D. for support of the company. The food company was asked to submit a proposition which it never did, said Mr. Gray.

The trustees refused to give any aid in selling food company stock which the company then sold independently. After the company had built a building in Brooks, it was unable to get a license for a creamery and bought the Bassano Creamery, said Mr. Gray.

REQUIRED REPAIRS

Questioned by G. M. Blackstock, K.C., commission counsel, Mr. Gray said the Brooks property of the food company was not in good shape and required repairs before it could be used. When there was thought of taking it over, the plans were to use part of it and lease part of it. Purchase of the building and the Bassano creamery would have cleaned up the food company property in the E.I.D. area.

Mr. Gray said the interest of one per cent on the 22,000 shades of National Food owned by Huistel and upon which he held a proxy was paid to obtain the proxy. The interest became payable if the proxy were held throughout 1939 which was not done. Mr. Blackstock also inquired about the option held by Mr. Gray on the 5,000 shares of Bassano Creamery and Produce Company.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Subject to Mr. Gray's honesty, Mr. Blackstock asked if he, Mr. Gray could not have exercised his option and taken control of the creamery itself. Mr. Gray said he had never any intention of doing anything of the kind. W. H. McLaws, K.C., counsel for Mr. Gray, interjected that public announcement had been made that the company was to be producer owned.

Mr. Blackstock asked Mr. Gray why he used the word "force" when he said the National Food Company had to buy the Bassano Creamery. Mr. Gray said the food company had built a building in Brooks and then applied for a license for a creamery. The minister of agriculture, W. N. Chant, had refused the license because of the proximity of the Bassano Creamery, said Mr. Gray.

Mr. Chant had also said the only way to obtain a license would be to buy out the Bassano Creamery.

Leonard Hansen of Bassano, employee of the National Food Company, said he had been in the employ of the company prior to formation of the separate Bassano Creamery Company. He had been employed also by the separate company and continued to work at the plant after it reverted to the food company again.

King, Queen

Island's people, and his "deep sympathy with them in the trials which they have had to face, and my appreciation of their loyalty."

ROARED WELCOME

All along the route through the city, thousands of Newfoundlanders roared a welcome to The King and Queen. Fifteen thousand school children were among those lined up on the line of procession.

The King and Queen smiled back hearty greetings. Both appeared in the best of spirits after a day of rest on the liner. The King, obviously tired when he left Halifax Thursday night, seemed particularly refreshed. His radio address was delivered in a clear, resonant voice.

Weather conditions for the Royal visit here were not the best. It was overcast in St. John's, and on the drive in from Holyrood The King and Queen had run into scattered showers, though the rain held off until after their arrival.

All along the route a series of arches spanned the road, most of them representing phases in Newfoundland's development. They bore the same legend: "Welcome to Your Majesties."

COLOR PARTY

At Government house a color party carrying the flag of the Royal Newfoundland regiment, and an ex-servicemen's guard of honor were drawn up. There, dignitaries of the church and state in Newfoundland were presented to Their Majesties.

The King and Queen went from Government house to a moving ceremony at the memorial to Newfoundland's Great War dead. On the spot where Sir Humphrey Gilbert reputedly took possession of the island for Britain in 1583, King George walked alone to the base of the monument and deposited a wreath.

War veterans were drawn up at the memorial, and the King inspected them. Afterwards he and the Queen each planted a tree beside the spot.

MANION SAYS RAILWAY VOTE MEAN TRICK

Conservative Leader Affirms Opposition To Unification

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., June 17—The recent senate vote in favor of railway unification was designed to embarrass the Conservative party, Hon. R. J. Manion, Conservative leader, told a public meeting last night as he reaffirmed his opposition to railway unification.

Dr. Manion spoke at a gathering held in connection with the annual meeting of the East Centre Ontario Conservative Association. He and Lieut. Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, addressed various gatherings held during the one-day convention.

FAVOR CO-OPERATION

The National Conservative party at its convention a year ago declared its policy as opposed to any amalgamation which would create a railway monopoly and in favor of co-operation between the two railways, subject to the safeguarding of the rights of labor, he said.

"I say without any equivocation," Dr. Manion declared, "that unification is no solution of the railway problem so far as the deficits of the Canadian National Railways are concerned. The estimated saving of $75,000,000 a year is exaggerated by at least 200 per cent."

The reason for the railway problem was the automobile. If the railways were unified the deficit would remain and as long as the deficit had to be paid out of public funds the railways would be in politics.

Unification would create a huge monopoly which could control the whole Dominion.

"I believe great relief is possible from the burden of railway deficits," added the Conservative leader. "And I will give a plan for that in the near future."

With dictators in Europe looking about for territory, it was necessary to take steps to defend Canada, said Dr. Manion, but there should be no profiteering in patriotism. Defence should be put on a high plane, free from petty political patronage.

Japanese

British concession. The British consul-general took steps to obtain Smith's release.

Informed Britons said they were preparing for a long "siege" in the belief that only the solution of the larger issues between Japanese and foreigners could end the Anglo-Japanese crisis arising from a Japanese blockade of Tientsin's British and French concessions imposed four days ago.

AIR OF PESSIMISM

An air of pessimism and a fatalistic acceptance of their situation was noticeable among foreigners, as food prices soared. A milk shortage caused hardships among children and Japanese urged Chinese to bring independent pressure on the British authorities to accede to the Japanese demands.

In qualified British quarters the view was expressed that a "showdown is coming within a few months, probably involving the Shanghai international settlement as well as the Tientsin concessions" and that "the times will be difficult, but the chief danger lies in the fact that a grave incident may occur, involving the use of armed force."

ADDITIONAL CONDITIONS

(The blockade was imposed originally because British authorities refused to hand over to Japanese four Chinese accused by Japanese of killing a Tientsin official. Since then Japanese informants have outlined these additional conditions for settlement of the dispute; strict control of anti-Japanese organizations; cessation of "economic disturbances in north China," delivery of 50,000,000 Chinese dollars (about $6,000,000) deposited in the concession by the Chinese Nationalist government; unconditional surrender by the British authorities on all issues involved, including "sweeping pledges of future co-operation with Japanese authorities.")

Dispatches reaching Shanghai from Amoy, south China, reported Japan was maintaining a strict blockade of Amoy's international zone, with passage permitted only to those junks which flew a special Japanese flag and were registered with Amoy naval headquarters. Chinese junk owners hesitated to display the flag for fear of reprisals upon reaching Chinese-controlled territory where they obtain food supplies.

Chamberlain Warns Japan Of Danger

British United Press

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 17—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain warned Japan today against the danger of a "regrettable incident" and declared that Britain is in close consultation with the French and United States governments.

Mr. Chamberlain announced that Sir Robert Craigie, British ambassador to Tokyo, had made representations to the Japanese government about the Tientsin blockade, pointing out the danger of "provocative action by the Japanese which might lead to a regrettable incident."

Mr. Chamberlain refused to state whether Britain would take reprisals such as denouncing the British-Japanese trade treaty of 1911.

CONSIDERS REPRISALS

Nevertheless, it was understood Britain was taking the question of reprisals into serious consideration.

A special cabinet meeting has been called for Monday.

"The situation is a grave one and His Majesty's government are considering it in all its aspects. I am not prepared at this moment to say what action we shall take," said Mr. Chamberlain.

Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, Conservative, asked "whether in considering the measures to be taken, the Prime Minister will consider the advisability of giving notice to the Japanese government that if the blockade is not raised within 24 hours, the British-Japanese agreement of 1911 will be denounced forthwith?"

Chamberlain replied:

"I cannot add anything to the statement I have made."

JOINS CHORUS

Frederick Bellenger, Laborite, joined the chorus with:

"In view of the anxiety for the safety of British residents, may I ask whether the Prime Minister has any information that British residents have adequate food supplies, including vegetables, in order to withstand the blockade?"

"I have given the house all the information I have at the moment," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

British and U.S. In Consultation

WASHINGTON, June 17—The British and American governments today exchanged information on conditions at Tientsin and Kulangsu, where Japanese military authorities have blockaded the foreign concessions.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said the conversations, carried on by representatives of the British embassy and divisional heads in the state department, constituted merely exchanges of factual information.

Hull said he had no information regarding any plan for joint action by the American and British governments in the dispute at Tientsin.

Japanese Move Forces To Borders

TIENTSIN, June 17—Japanese military authorities moved additional forces to the borders of the blockaded British concession and announced that their "punitive measures" will be increased unless an early settlement of their demands on the British are met. Tanks were included in the reinforcements.

Authorities of the blockaded British concession have appealed to commanders of British warships to get food to them, the Japanese Domei News Agency reported today.

The appeal followed shooting of two Chinese farmers by Japanese sentries when the farmers sought to run the blockade of the British and French concessions with vegetables.

In asking British warships to move food into the concession from Chingwangtao and Weihaiwei, authorities said the food would be regarded as military supplies and would be distributed throughout the concession.

The Japanese doubted that the British naval commanders would heed the appeal. Tientsin is about 20 miles from the sea and warships would have to run under the muzzles of Japanese land batteries lining the Hai river, which is less than 75 yards wide at some points and is so shallow that only comparatively small craft can use it.

Authorities said the British are preparing 1,000 soldiers and volunteers for any emergency. Japanese sources reported that 50 British soldiers inspected the concession's defenses and strengthened the barricades.

Most stores were closed.

les searching loss of the Phenix and its crew was considered certain."

Sabotage Hinted In Submarine Disaster

PARIS, June 17.—Hints of suspected sabotage began to creep into sections of the Paris press today as France mourned the disappearance of the 2,000-ton submarine Phenix, with 71 men aboard, off the coast of Indo China.

Writers in several newspapers asked questions such as: "Can this be the law of averages—that three democracies lose three submarines in less than a month?"

The Communist paper l'Humanite said: "This demands suspicion." It linked three submarine disasters suffered by the United States, Great Britain and France, with loss of the 34,000-ton French liner Paris, which burned April 19 at her Le Havre dock. French authorities have worked on the theory that the fire was set by foreign agents.

LONDON, June 17.—Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, today sent a telegram to the French navy minister, Cesar Campinchi, expressing the Royal Navy's "very deep regret for the disaster to the submarine Phenix and our very deep sympathy for the French navy on the occasion of what we greatly fear must be the loss of so many valuable lives."

Attendance At World's Fair Is Not Up To Mark

NEW YORK, June 17.—Reduction in the New York World's Fair admission price from 75 cents to 50 cents and an immediate nationwide advertising campaign to increase attendance were demanded Friday in a resolution by 27 fair amusement area concessionaries. Attendance has been below official predictions.

Killed By Fall

VICTORIA, June 17. — Frank Montgomery, 22, New Westminster, B.C., was killed Thursday night when he dropped 40 feet down a cliff on the banks of the Sombrio river on Vancouver Island and broke his neck.

CANCER REPORT SUBMITTED TO HOSPITAL BOARD

Stressing the necessity for a cancer prevention campaign, Dr. G. H. Malcolmson, chairman of the cancer committee, reported on the committee's work at the regular meeting of the Edmonton Hospital Board Friday. He said citizens should be educated in the vital necessity of submitting to regular medical examination as a preventative for all types of illness.

Dr. Malcolmson stated that cancer was not a fatal disease and could be cured if diagnosed in time. The trouble was that many sufferers did not submit themselves for medical examination until the disease had taken too great a hold. He stressed the necessity of systematic medical check-up.

Dr. H. P. Sprague reported on the work being done to train internes and other officials in the detection of cancer. Routine reports of hospital activities were submitted by Dr. Anderson, hospital superintendent.

Financial statement passed by the Hospital Board showed that operation costs for Royal Alexandra and Isolation hospitals for May were $42,720, an increase of $2,000 over May of last year. Combined operating costs to the end of May were more than $12,000 above the 1938 figure.

There were 34 deaths in the hospital during May, Dr. A. F. Anderson, superintendent, reported. The daily average number of patients was 368, and there were 112 births, with no maternity deaths. Infant mortality totalled three, two from premature birth and one from congenital disease.

Royal Train

agility in dropping off the moving train gave them the jitters at times: they felt sure he'd break his neck, but he had no mishaps.

The Prime Minister could have walked through one of the Royal cars and descended from the front platform of car No. 1, but he refused to go through Their Majesties' cars at any time unless invited. He felt it would be an intrusion.

WORKED STEADILY

Mr. King worked steadily every day at routine affairs and when others were resting at Banff and Jasper he was catching up on any arrears. As a result he arrived in Ottawa with his work all caught up and so went out to Kingsmere for a week-end rest before resuming his routine duties.

The Interdepartmental Committee also returned to Ottawa on the blue and silver train. There were nine members on the committee, three of whom travelled on the Royal train. Dr. E. H. Coleman, under secretary of state, was chairman of the committee, Brigadier S. T. Wood, chief commissioner of the R.C.M.P., in charge of police protection, and Dr. H. L. Keenleyside, of external affairs, dealing with imperial and international phases.

Maj. General G. H. Matthews of national defence headquarters, went in charge of all national defence protective and ceremonial matters and Brig. Gen. E. de B. Panet carried out the programmes for the entertainment of Their Majesties such as at Banff and Jasper. Dr. Gustave Lanctot, the Dominion archivist, went along as official historian.

ALL RETURN TO OTTAWA

All returned to the capital on the Royal train, the only Canadian going to Newfoundland and back to England being Andrew Carnegie of the Canadian Press who accompanied Their Majesties on the voyage out and on the Canadian tour.

On the American continent your own correspondent accompanied Their Majesties for a longer period than anyone else. I saw them out at sea entering Canadian waters, accompanied them up the St. Lawrence, and remained continuously throughout the Canadian and American tours, and finally again watched them leave Canadian waters bound for Newfoundland, a matter of 10,000 miles or more.

ROYAL TOUR SUCCESS

The prime minister, bronzed and fit from his month of travel as minister in attendance upon The King, declared the Royal tour was a success beyond all his hopes.

"I never doubted the Royal Visit would be a success," he said, "but I did not realize what a tremendous success it would be. The great thing about it was the complete co-operation of the provinces and municipalities. I have never known such complete unity of effort and feeling."

FEELING 100 PER CENT

"I am feeling 100 per cent better than when the tour started," the prime minister said. Asked as to his immediate plans, the prime minister said he would go to his country home at Kingsmere "to collect my thoughts" and would probably meet council early next week.

The scene at Halifax where Canada said farewell to Their Majesties had greatly impressed the Prime Minister. "It was like the finale to a great opera," he said. Asked if he would make any general statement on the Royal visit, the Prime Minister said "it speaks for itself. I don't believe anything I could say could add to the story it has told."

SMALL CROWD

Although it was not generally known what time the Royal train would arrive at Ottawa there was a small crowd of people waiting in the concourse when the Prime Minister and Royal train party passed through the gates.

A loud cheer greeted the Prime Minister and he stopped, raised his hat to acknowledge the cheers and shook hands with many who pressed forward. He proceeded at once to Laurier House after which he intended to pay a brief visit to his office in the East block before going to his summer home in the nearby Gatineau hills of Quebec.

ALBERTA SALES TAX FAVORED BY MUNICIPALITIES

LETHBRIDGE, June 17.—With only four dissenting votes delegates to the 35th annual convention of the Union of Alberta Municipalities Friday voted in favor of the province imposing a sales tax with as "few exemptions as possible," the proceeds therefrom to be paid over to the municipalities pro rata to relieve property of the present heavy educational taxes. The resolution was an alternative to various proposals put forward by municipalities to relieve property of the heavy school taxes now being paid. Some of the delegates objected because, they argued, the government would keep the revenue and would not pass it on to the hard-pressed municipalities.

McFarland

vice-president, was chairman until Mr. Barrowman came.

According to present indications, executive and council members approach the Unity question from various views. Liberal members of the Council were exclaiming Saturday, as they arrived for their afternoon deliberations, that "Members of McFarland's Unity Party were nothing but Tories who are wearing masks" and thus would have the Council refuse to accept the Unity proposition.

Another group, smaller at present in number, said that the Liberal Party would be unwise to take up a completely hostile attitude to Unity. Proposal has been mooted in some quarters to have co-operation with individual candidates in some constituencies who would run without the party label, but would, if elected, support Liberal members of the legislature.

STEADY CONCERT

Under this plan, any co-operation if found feasible, would be with individuals and not with other political parties and in no sense would involve a breach of Liberal party principles, executive members explained. One result likely to emerge from the Saturday deliberations, they added, was that Mr. Gray and the Liberal executive would act in steady concert in the future in drafting any major statements of party principles and conduct. Mr. Gray is head of the committee preparing draft resolutions that will be incorporated after the council debate, as part of the party platform. He assumed this responsibility, at the executive's request, when it met in Edmonton in May.

Federal matters will occupy a minor role here as the party bends its energies to the shaping of Liberal principles that will make it an instrument for securing in the provincial field, social reforms and advanced policies for Alberta, executive members said.

EXECUTIVE MEMBERS

Executive members present are: Robert Barrowman, Lethbridge; Hugh Montgomery, Wetaskiwin; E. L. Gray, M.L.A. for Edmonton and Alberta Liberal leader, Brooks; Dr. Walter Morrish, M.L.A., Edmonton; J. J. Bowlen, M.L.A., Calgary; Gerald O'Connor, K.C., M.L.A., Edmonton, J. H. Tremblay, M.L.A., Grouard; Walter Bissell, Viking; Mrs. J. P. Ferguson, Trochu; Manley J. Edwards, Calgary; George J. Bryan, Stony Plain, secretary; W. Harry Ross, Calgary, treasurer and W. C. Barrie, Edmonton.

Quorum for the council consists of 75 members, highest body in the Liberal organizatizon. The council is composed of presidents of all Provincial and Federal Liberal Associations, all M.L.A.'s, M.P.'s and senators, all defeated and present candidates in both the Liberal and provincial fields, and delegates each for the Alberta Women's Liberal Association and for the Young Liberal Association.

Precautions Are Taken Against Horse Disease

VICTORIA, June 17.—The British Columbia department of agriculture announced special regulations Friday as precautions against race horses bringing the dread equine disease, encephalomyelitis, into the province.

All recognized race tracks are declared special quarantine areas and horses going to them must travel either by railway car or truck, not on foot.

Any horse coming into the province to race may be ordered vaccinated and no horse can be moved away from a track to a place that is not a quarantine area without a special permit.

SUCCESSOR TO CHARLESWORTH TO BE NAMED

LETHBRIDGE, June 17—A successor to L. C. Charlesworth, retired member of the provincial irrigation council, will be made in the near future, said Hon. D. B. Mullen, Alberta Minister of Agriculture here Friday. "I want to take my time and be very careful about selecting the best man for the important post, but the appointment will be made in the near future."

Asked whether there would be an election this fall he answered, "As far as I'm concerned I'm too busy to even think of an election. I don't see any call for one at present."

$800 DAMAGES ARE AWARDED TO MOTORIST

Submission by George B. O'Connor, K.C., that Rev. Guy Michaud, Edmonton, was responsible for the accident when he turned his motor car between intersections, was accepted by Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing, who, in a judgment handed down Friday, awarded $800 special and general damages to Robert G. Miles, former Edmonton motor car salesman now resident in Winnipeg.

The court action arose out of an accident on Jasper avenue at Thornton Court intersection on March 30, 1938.

Evidence disclosed that Father Michaud turned his car at a point on Jasper Avenue other than that designated for such turn, mistaking a yellow-colored light standard as the turning point. The crash followed when Mr. Miles, driving west on the avenue, struck the turning car as he came from behind a street car.

The defence submitted that the plaintiff was travelling at an excessive speed, but the court held that the defendant's action in making the turn at the wrong place had contributed to the accident. He found the plaintiff was travelling faster than most drivers, but could not find he was driving at an excessive speed.

Governor Greets Hudson's Bay Store Staff

—By Bulletin Staff Photographer

An inspection of all departments of the Hudson's Bay Company store, Friday, by Major P. Ashley Cooper of London, England, did not mean a cold, businesslike review of efficiency and methods, but was characterized by a keen interest in the operations and friendly chats with junior members of his staff. Governor Cooper, who heads one of the world's largest merchant organizations, is shown upper left as he conversed with Martin Graham, head of sales in the staples department, left. Also chatting with the governor is R. Simpson, manager of the department and at extreme right is J. K. Hill, store manager. In the upper right picture Major Cooper shakes hands in a smiling exchange of greetings with Miss Jessie Lohouse, saleslady in the hosiery department. Behind the governor stands G. B. Francey, manager of the hosiery, neckwear and silverware departments. Also showing marked interest in the store and its staff, Mrs. Cooper is shown lower right with T. S. Reid, manager of the foods department.

CANNED GOODS TO BE JUDGED AT EXHIBITION

For the 1939 Edmonton Exhibition, it has been decided that articles of canned goods shown in the one-farm exhibits class will not be opened for judging, but that the judging of canned fruits, vegetables, meats and other foodstuffs will be solely on appearance and variety.

This will eliminate the annoyance of the spoilage of canned goods in warm weather and will also tend to make possible a more attractive exhibit. Exhibitors are invited to write to the Edmonton Exhibition Association for a free prize list, entry forms and all information. Fair dates in Edmonton this year are July 17 to 22, and the gayest and biggest exhibition ever staged is planned in celebration of the Royal Visit. The advance sale of tickets is again being conducted throughout Northern Alberta at reduced prices and single-fare-return rates will prevail on railways and bus lines.

Western Farmers Would Welcome Warm Weather

WINNIPEG, June 17. — Western farmers, with fields moisture-laden, would welcome warm weather to aid the wheat and coarse grains crops across the prairies.

Crop reports of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways issued here last night stress need of warm weather after heavy precipitation in most grain areas.

'Western Canada's crop outlook continues on an extremely high level in many localities considered the best for many years for mid-June," says the C. P. R. report.

The C. N. R. reports light to heavy frosts in northern Manitoba and central Saskatchewan with some damage to barley and oats and to vegetable gardens.

Poor Papa Remembered By Family This Sunday: It's Dad's Day to Howl

Remember that song that was heard over the radio just when the jazz age was on the wane? "Poor papa, poor papa, he gets nothin' at all" was the refrain, and one of the verses had something about "Christmas comes and mamma gets the latest Paris frocks; Poppa gets a necktie and a ten cent pair of socks."

Yep. Then wuz the days when Dad would listen in and chuckle "Ain't it the truth."

But tomorrow, "the old pot and pan" as the Cockney lads used to call him, won't be able to give the world the idea that he's the picked on pappy of the song sheets. No siree, for tomorrow is "Dad's Day," (Father's Day to you if you insist on it) and that's the day Dad comes into his own.

HE'LL GO TO TOWN

Mother's Day has been the vogue for some years now, but Father's Day is just a juvenile. But will the Old Man go to town

It will be "Dad's Day to Howl" and if you're a loving wife and mother, you'll overlook those little details like Dad hanging around in pyjamas and dressing gown all day, without a shave, and making periodical raids on the ice box, or dropping cigar ashes all over the rugs.

You'll even overlook the fact that he didn't get home until 3 a.m. from that meeting of the "Jacks-or-Better-to-Open-Club" and say nothing about it. You might even go so far as to bring his breakfast to bed and say nothing if he gets egg all over the covers.

HE CAN PLAY GOLF

Or if he's one of the out-doors kind you'll urge him to forget the fact that he should take the family for a drive and tell him to take the car and get out with the boys and play golf for as long as he likes.

If the family bank-roll isn't too depleted today you might take some of Dad's dough and buy him a new tie, or a pipe, or a box of cigars. It's even on the cards you might causally borrow his liquor permit and get him something that liquor permits are good for.

What's my interest in all this? G'wan—I'm one of the guys entitled to take a bow today. I'm a Dad.

Now Or Never—For Nazis

By DR. H. L. STEWART

Professor of Philosophy, Dalhousie University, and Editor of Dalhousie Review.

MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL has been soliciting the attention of the public again, and on a matter regarding which he has earned the right to be heard. No Englishman is more entitled to an audience on problems of national safety than this lone private member of parliament who, during at least three years of fruitless admonition to the government, urged measures now everywhere seen to have been both right and imperative. His recent article in Collier's, under heading "War, Now or Never," is of the sort which, as the French say, gives one furiously to think.

The burden of the argument is that if Hitler means war, now is his best time. For if he waits, say a year his gain (through a longer time to conscript soldiers from a country fifty per cent larger in population than France) will be by no means equal to his loss through the speed with which the other side is making up its deficiency in the air. It is true that just now the French land forces are conspicuously superior to the German, because the 1,500,000 at Hitler's disposal include a very large number of men inadequately trained, who would have to meet antagonists from a country in which conscription was never suspended. Time will, of course, alter this.

It is refreshing to hear from this keenest (and at times most suspicious) of critics of the British Air Force that in his judgment that Force is already far stronger than it was at the grim period we recall as "Munich," and that by 1940 there should be a great measure of confidence in the efficacy of the arrangements for defending the British Isles against hostile airplane.

More and more, during the last nine months, has this advantage been improved by those who have the "Halt-Hitler" design in charge.

So far the reassurance of Mr. Churchill's article sounds good. But the conclusion is startling. It is all the more so because, for those who have followed the argument, it seems not only natural but inevitable.

In Mr. Churchill's forecast, then, presented with resources of keen observation and long experience in high government responsibility, we must look for a German war move very soon, "unless some change of heart or change of regime takes place in Germany in the near future." This article promises us a period of intense strain and anxiety in the coming summer and autumn months.

It is an experience to which, by this time, we are at least well accustomed. But surely account ought to be taken of at least one counterbalancing possibility. What the Germans and Italians call "encirclement" is going on fast: not as a scheme of aggression, but as a scheme of self-defence. If the network being framed for catching international criminals is made complete by the co-operation of Russia, they will have to think in Berlin of yet another set of statistics—besides those of the gain by land as against the loss by air during the next twelve months of Nazi preparation to fight Great Britain and France. The thought should give them pause.

Let us hope that the Churchill article, in an American magazine, with its tragic suggestiveness, will not be lost on at least American readers of this curiously "pacifist" type. If it is peace they desire, theirs is the likeliest way to defeat their own aim. And it was not an "Imperialist" who left us the most significant warning on that point. Who was it that bade Americans remember how adequate preparation for war is often the surest safeguard of peace?

It was George Washington.

PROVINCE TO MAIL CHEQUE RELIEF SHARE

Alberta Will Pay 40 Per Cent. Pending Agreement

Provincial share of unemployment relief to cities for April will be forwarded by cheque immediately, Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health and in charge of relief, stated Saturday. The cheques will go out on the basis of the province paying 40 per cent of the unemployment relief costs.

It is expected that the Dominion cheque on account of unemployment relief for April will be received by the province within the next few days, after which it will be split and divided on a share-basis among the cities.

Although the province is sending out its cheque for 40 per cent of relief costs for April, this does not mean that it has accepted the new agreement whereby the Dominion and provincial governments will pay 40 per cent each and the municipal governments will pay 20 per cent.

Dr. Cross stated that the agreement for the 40-40-20 division was still under negotiation and no final accord had been reached.

Under previous arrangement the Dominion has been paying to the province a lump sum of $125,000 a month on account of unemployment relief.

If the new basis is finally accepted it would mean, it is estimated, about 10 per cent increase in the amount the province is paying out.

United Church Members Urged To Be On Alert

MONTREAL, June 17—Members of the United Church of Canada were cautioned Friday, in a statement on the Quebec marriage law drawn up by the Montreal and Ottawa conference and circulated to the clergy, "To be on the alert against any attempts by any religious community" to take away common rights and liberties.

In this and other matters, "As citizens of Canada we insist on equal rights for our church, for our ministers and for our sons and daughters before the law of the land,' said the statement.

People Must Have Houses

Alberta cities are not the only ones where it is impossible to obtain building loans. The city of Windsor, Ontario, is facing the same difficulty. The Border Cities Research and Housing Committee reports that the Dominion housing scheme "has been a complete failure in this and many other communities throughout the Dominion."

The Committee states that out of 20 loan companies approved by the Government to make loans under the Act only five have made agreements with the Minister of Finance. And apparently these five are not doing business in Windsor, for "despite the clamor of hundreds of applicants (there) no funds are available for loans in the 90 per cent class".

As a result, the proposal is made that parliament set up a Government-owned lending corporation, with power to issue debentures to be sold to the public, similar in structure and functions to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the United States. Boiled down, this means direct Government loans or Government-guaranteed loans for house building. It is stipulated that interest should not exceed five per cent.

If the loan companies have decided there is no profit in lending money for home-building in Canada at 5 per cent, the probability is growing that they will be excused from invitations to do so.

More Production Advised

Alberta cattlemen, meeting in Calgary, were told by officials of the Dominion Government that they, and Canadian livestock growers in general, should increase production in expectation of larger export demand. Canadian meats and meat animals were popular in the British market, but to hold that market the supply must be constant.

The trade in Britain could not be used as a convenient outlet for surplus stock when other markets were glutted, and left to find other sources of supply at other times. The aim should be to provide a steady, consistent volume of exports, upon which British dealers could rely, and thus build up a customer-demand for Canadian beef and other meat products.

The fear behind this warning evidently was that Canadian growers, cattlemen in particular, may aim too exclusively to meet the demand opened up in the United States by the new trade agreement. But as this demand is hedged about by quota limitations, too heavy production of the types favored in that trade might leave a surplus of animals unsuitable for the British buyers.

Grain growers will also be interested, because a market for stock means a market for stock feed. And the public generally, obsessed and depressed by the idea that increased production of anything is folly, will surely note with satisfaction that there is at least one branch of farming in which the call is for more and not less production.

A Job Well Done

Canada's Broadcasting Corporation made a good job of "covering" the Royal tour of the Dominion, and of linking up with United States systems to bring Canadian listeners instant descriptions of the receptions there. This was the longest and most difficult assignment the Corporation and its staff have undertaken, perhaps the most difficult that ever fell to the lot of a broadcasting system anywhere, and the work was well done.

The Canadian commentators, who supplied running reports of the progress of the tour, including everything from the costumes worn by the Queen to the off-schedule incidents which caught the observers unaware, gave accounts which compared favorably with those supplied from Washington and New York.

There was not a break-down or a tie-up in the service, for which credit goes to the men who serve unseen, the engineers who control and regulate the complicated and delicate mechanism by which the sounds which enter the microphone are reproduced in a million receiving sets. They managed so well that the listener heard everything from the conversational tones of the Queen to the blaring of bands and the deafening cheers of crowds—without the apparatus being once "blown off the air". These men, like their colleagues who did the commenting, know their business.

A paticularly welcome feature of the coverage was the evening re-broadcast, which brought to those who were busy during the day a word picture of its proceedings. To the men who were at work during the day and the children who were in school, this daily reproduction was important, and it was greatly appreciated.

The CBC came through the severe test with a fine record of performance, for which it deserves full recognition.

Torture at Tientsin

The Japanese military authorities have undertaken to starve residents of the British and French concessions at Tientsin, and apparently also at Amoy. A blockade has been established at either place to prevent food supplies passing into the foreign settlements. The commanders say the blockades will be maintained until Britain promises "complete co-operation" in their undeclared war for the conquest of China.

What they mean by "co-operation" is explained in their detailed demands. Britain is required to "cease protecting anti-Japanese and communistic elements," by affording them asylum in the concessions; to stop supporting Chinese currency as the money of China; to stop the hoarding of goods in Tientsin; to stop the use of diplomatic and naval radio systems by residents of the concessions; to permit the use of Japanese-prepared school books in the concession schools.

Britain, that is to say, and presumably also France, is required to abandon neutrality toward China and to assist in subjugating the country to the invaders; under threat that unless this is done the residents of the concessions will have to starve or get out—if they are allowed to get out.

The nature of these demands exposes the hollow pretence that what the Japanese authorities wanted was the surrender of four Chinese whom they accuse of having killed a Japanese official and who have taken refuge in the foreign concessions at Tientsin. It is not known, by the way, that the refugees committed the crime, and the Japanese officials refused investigation by an international committee.

They have now thrown off the pretence, and openly demand that Britain—and France—aid and abet them in the plot to destroy China. There is nothing in their conduct to date to suggest that the Japanese military leaders would not carry out their threat to starve the residents of the concessions unless their demands are complied with. They have done as cruel things to Chinese civilians; and nominally Japan is at peace with China, as it is with Britain and France.

Back To Old School

Many likely will envy Premier Patterson an experience he is to have next month. He has been invited back to the old school at Grenfell that he attended as a boy. The school is to take note in July of the 50th anniversary of its inauguration, and adults of today who attended the school—a combined public and continuation school—in the days of their boyhood or girlhood are being invited back for the commemorative function.

Who wouldn't appreciate an invitation of this sort? As a matter of fact, where is the man or woman who doesn't like going back to his or her school of childhood days, whether formally invited to do so or not? Who doesn't like meandering around classrooms wherein he sat as a child say 40 or 50 years ago? Or browsing round the playing field outside where he took a fling at baseball or football in those now far-off years? Or looking in on the cloak room or shed attached to the school at the rear where the teacher of the time was wont to repair with unruly lads and treat them to a hiding with a strap?

School days are an unforgettable experience, and quite unforgettable too revisiting the school of one's boyhood or girlhood after long absence. This latter takes one back to the beginning of things, makes for a recasting of vision and stirs the memory and warms the heart as do few other experiences.

One is glad that Mr. Patterson is being invited back to the old school, and that he is so looking forward to the experience. There is particular interest about the visit ahead of him in that he is the first native-born Saskatchewan man to become prime minister of the province. —Regina Leader-Post.

Let Us Get On With Things

Not the least benefit derived from the Canadian tour of Their Majesties has been its effect in driving the swaggering dictators off the front page. This paper admits frankly that it has been guilty, along with others, of overplaying the gestures of the montebanks and unconsciously helping them to spread the jitters. Perhaps some of it was necessary to ensure a measure of security. Thanks, however, to the energy and foresight of British leadership, and the co-operation of the United States, the braggarts can no longer make the world tremble at their word. By making this momentous journey far from home, the King and Queen have inspired confidence here and elsewhere. They have revitalized the British Empire and given all something else to think and talk about than the Duce and the Fuehrer.

Now it is up to us to take things in hand. We have reasons to consider the dictators' balloon pricked. Their importance is relegated to the background. Let us keep it there until we find real cause for alarm and, without relaxing safeguards, get on with the pressing business of making this domain to Their Majesties more worthy of their sovereignty. We cannot show our respect for the King and Queen better than by accepting the example in confidence they have given us and proceed with our affairs even as they have, in an extraordinary degree, with theirs.

What can we do? We can go ahead with business as usual. We can take advantage of the intensified interest in this country, and prove our pride in the heritage of which His Majesty has spoken so highly. We can overcome the spirit of defeatism which has taken too firm a grip, and be what we have every right to be—men and women of driving force rejoicing in the exceptional opportunities millions of people elsewhere would give much to possess.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

The Attack That Failed

The Senate's recent surprise attack on the Canadian National Railways has turned out a sorry failure. Hardly anybody appears to be impressed by a vote of 25 Conservative Senators for unification of the railways against a vote of 21 Conservatives and Liberals against it. This was a supreme effort by the die-hards of the Senate, but it has left the railway problem exactly where it was.

Some few editors, however, appear to have been impressed. The Montreal Star goes completely off the deep end by suggesting that as we cannot find trustworthy representatives in the elected House of Commons to tell the truth about our railways we ought to trust the Senate and "public men who are not going to stand for election this year or any other year." This is the most direct and simple pattern for a Canadian dictatorship that we have yet encountered in a responsible newspaper. The railway problem moves men to strange depths.

The Conservative Ottawa Journal, however, is optimistic enough to believe that the Canadian National system, having shown a gain of over $1,000,000 in revenues in April over those of April, 1938, may once more cover not only its operating expenses, as it does now, but its huge debt charges as well. This it did in 1929 with a margin to spare.

Last year the National system ran a total deficit of $54,000,000. The argument of the Conservative Senators and other advocates of unification is that this deficit could be largely eliminated if the National sank its identity in a single railway system.

The Winnipeg Free Press, which has studied the problem for years, thinks the annual saving by unification would reach $25,000,000 at most and only half that would go to the National. If the railways would pursue a real policy of co-operation, without unification, they could probably save $10,000,000, the Free Press believes. Thus the net advantage of unification as opposed to real co-operation would be only $7,500,000 a year to the Canadian taxpayers. The price of that, the creation of a complete transportation monopoly in Canada, is too high.

Three main facts emerge out of this new discussion of the railway problem. First, that the payment of railway deficits is not a total loss, because it gives a large part of this country essential transportation. Second, the deficits of the National will only be wiped out by an expansion of the country's trade, especially in exports which fill railway cars. Third, co-operation between the railways will never be made effective and whole-hearted so long as people like the Conservative Senators are trying by hook or crook, through the front door or the back door, to sink the National system. Under such threats men, being human, do not readily co-operate.—Vancouver Sun.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Several readers have expressed interest in the case, commented on recently in this column, of an elderly friend who has accomplished remarkable rejuvenation, without an operation. "Re-activation" he calls it, and promises to introduce me to several others of his acquaintance who have similarly benefitted. Anything that can prolong the usefulness and enjoyment of the later years of life, should be a boon to mankind. One reader writes reprovingly. She calls it "tampering with Nature." Like any other healthy man I've a feeling of aversion—probably born of health and without reason—against rejuvenation operations. But taking foods or extracts that feed or activate the glands which control the mechanism of robust life, is no more "tampering with Nature" than taking a liverpill or an aspirin tablet.

MORE ABOUT REJUVENATION

Strictly speaking, every beauty treatment, every hair cut or manicure is "tampering with Nature." There are many religionists who think it a sin to cut the hairy growths of the human body. Some of the religions of India prescribe rules and observances in matters much more intimate than cutting the hair or the toenails.

The lady writes as her mind sees. Another type of mind might with equal truth call it "assisting Nature" instead of "tampering with Nature."

Endrocrinology, as the study of glands is called, is outside the range of my authority. I am only familiar with it, as with many another science, to the extent of comprehending its lingo, scope and aim. There's a whole bibliography on the internal secretory organs for those who wish solid study. But the remarkable results of treating cretins with thyroid extracts, and of sufferers from under-action and over-action of the pituitary gland at the base of the brain, show in visible form the effect of glandular defects and results of treatment.

"THE GLANDS OF DESTINY"

It isn't only in making people fat or thin, dwarfs or giants, but it affects the character and personality. Dr. Ivo Geikie Cobb calls one of his several books on endrocrinology "The Glands of Destiny." He argues that we are all precisely what our glands make us. My old friend who at 70 is developing a considerable estate (part of it involving the drilling of an oil well) says he is entirely free from worry, though at one time he was so nerve-wrought he burst into tears when frustrated by small difficulties.

Diabetics who take animal insulin to make up for the failure of the pancreas to secrete the sugar-consuming hormone from the islets of Langerhans are really taking a glandular extract. They are "tampering with Nature"—to their own good.

The obstacle to free discussion of these things is that many people think they are sacrosanct. This is indicated in the discussion of the allied question of euthanasia—the painless hastening of the death of an incurable sufferer. Many leading doctors in England, touched by the sufferings of incurables craving relief from pain urge that the profession be allowed to accede to the request of an incurable sufferer. I recall a torturous episode of several years ago when an aged prospector in northern B.C., suffering incurable agony, begged me to hit him on the head with a hammer to end his suffering. Doctors must frequently experience such pleas for relief.

SUFFERERS SEEK RELIEF

This is a question solely for the sufferer and his doctor. Yet persons in robust health and free from pain, broke up a public debate in disorder recently when Dr. James Purves-Stewart, noted nerve specialist, read a letter from a "distinguished surgeon" telling how he had given huge injections of morphia to four hopless victims of a boiler explosion.

We're all under sentence of death. An incurable sufferer is in process of slow dying. There are only two valid purposes for any of us to continue living (a) that we are of use in the world or a help to others and (b) that it is pleasant to live. When we are no longer of use and life becomes a torture, euthanasia is merely a merciful way of speeding up Nature's purpose.

Happily the world has gone a long way since Dr. J. Y. Simpson's discovery of chloroform, when its use in operations and child birth was denounced as a sinful interference with the purposes of pain. Now that anaesthesia is used to take the edge from physical pain, it's a logical next step to prolong the years of physical vigor and enjoyment by whatever valid means are discovered.

Religion Day By Day

TOO MUCH VINE

One of my favorite plants is the acebia, with its curious three-blossom flower, and pendant balls, all of a rich brown color. For many years one has grown over our rear veranda.

But its ambition has been its doom. The vine bore its blossoms only on the top branches, and that meant, of late years, only on the roof. The stem of the vine is without foliage or flowers, and is, frankly, ugly. So this year, in my absence, it has been cut down. A climbing rose now occupies its place.

In its absence the acebia stresses this moral: bear your blooms down on the level of everyday life. Beware of being too high in your accomplishments for the benefit of your fellows. A rose before the eyes is better than an acebia on the roof; and a smile, a friendly word and a kindly deed, where they will serve others, are better than great accomplishments beyond their understanding.

We pray that our lives may be wayside flowers, for everybody's enjoyment. Grant us, dear Lord, the wisdom to be happy and helpful on the plane of life's everydayness. Amen.

Read John 15:1-8.

Whatever else may be said about them, Canada's railways are as efficient and well-managed as any in the world. Their equipment is unsurpassed. The trainmen from engine cab to caboose are master craftsmen, besides being among the aristocrats of the labor world. The railways are adequate for a much larger population. All they lack is traffic.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

Made in Japan

Editor, Bulletin: The protest voiced in the House at Ottawa by Mr. Thos. Reid, Liberal member from British Columbia, against Japanese-made totem poles and the protest appearing in this column regarding Japanese-made flags gives the impression that this output of the Jap is a new stunt. Twenty years ago, in Kobe, before the big earthquake and fire, I saw Indian (?) totem poles being carved from bone and walrus ivory in a Japanese ivory carving shop. I inquired of the Japanese proprietor about the trade. He told me he made hundreds of the poles for the British Columbia market. They were perfect copies of the genuine Indian work.

Five years later I was in Alaska and was given by a friend a six-inch high totem pole carved from walrus ivory. Remembering from experience in Kobe I closely scanned the brightly colored totem pole for a Japanese mark, but found none. A year or so later I was again examining the totem pole and noticed the lateral wings were groved on to the main body. By considerable pressure I removed one wing and there, between the inner edge of the wing and the body, was the Japanese character indicating the maker.

Verily "let the purchaser beware." Bret Hart's classic Chinese, whose ways were dark and whose tricks were vain, probably went to school in Japan.

PETER DUFFUS.

Smoke Nuisance

Editor, Bulletin: On Tuesday morning of this week a number of people walking along Jasper avenue, were startled to see dense clouds of oily black smoke rising from somewhere along Jasper East. The warm, bright sunshine was quickly blotted out and pedestrians were asking each other where the fire could be; some saying it must be the Bulletin building, others said the Blowey Henry building or Henry, Graham & Reid's warehouse.

We were relieved to learn that it was none of these but a quantity of old tires being burned on the grounds below the hill bearing the name of Wellington Terrace, bestowed upon it some years ago by our city fathers.

Some may remember the controversy which occurred about eight years ago when the city engineer insisted upon the necessity for spending $100,000 for a new incinerator to take care of all the city garbage.

His proposal to place this beside the water reservoir met with overwhelming disapproval and the plant was built elsewhere. It has never operated efficiently or at capacity, as I warned the city authorities at the time, and it has never fulfilled the purpose advanced by civic officials as justification for so large an expenditure of public funds.

Why, after having persuaded them to spend over $100,000 on a plant to consume the entire city's garbage without nuisance to the residents, are open dumps found throughout the city, in parks and on river banks, where, periodically, offensive odors and clouds of filthy smoke rise to befoul the air and obscure the health-giving sunshine in our city?

Such matters as these concern our citizens in all our communities, and this question is of vital concern to certain districts.

L. LLOYD JONES, President,
Edmonton Fed. Com. Leagues.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

It is just 20 years since we read in our newspapers of what was then the most daring feat in aviation. On this date in 1919 we were told how two young Englishmen had done something no one had ever done before—flown across the Atlantic! They were John Alcock and Arthur Whitton Brown.

Lord Northcliffe had in 1913 offered a prize of £10,000 to anyone who would fly the Atlantic in a heavier than air machine. The war intervened and nothing further was done until the spring of 1919 when a number of British airmen gathered in Newfoundland to essay the feat. On May 18, H. C. Hacker and Mackenzie Grieve took off from St. John's in the first attempted flight across the Atlantic. They got about half way when they were forced down, to be rescued and landed in Scotland.

Then on June 15, Alcock and Brown set out from St. John's, Nfld., in a twin engine Vickers biplane, and they landed at Clifden, Ireland, 15 hours, 12 minutes later, thus giving England priority in aviation. They were popular heroes and a few days later were knighted by King George V. Unhappily, Sir John Alcock did not live long after this triumph, being killed the following December near Rouen while flying from London to Paris.

Both Alcock and Brown were just typical Englishmen, engineers, who became airmen and who were among the pioneers of Britain's mighty air armada of today. When war came they joined the Royal Naval Air Force. Both fought with much gallantry against the Turks; both were wounded and both were taken prisoner. They took their honors modestly when presented with the £10,000 by Winston Churchill, on behalf of Lord Northcliffe, Alcock asserting that they had had good luck while Hawker and Grieve "the real pioneers," had bad luck.

A patient was sick in hospital and he asked one of the nurses to write a letter for him to his missus.

"The hospital is nice," he told her to write, "but the nurses are a poor lot, with faces like horses."

"Oh," the nurse said, "that's not fair on us, you know."

"Yes, I know," he told her, "but put it down just the same. It'll please the missus."

Sunshine Shafts

It is stated that "millions of germs cling to a treasury note." Which is more than we seem to be able to do.

"Rest and change are good for people," said the wife as she rose in the night to go through her husband's pockets. "I've had a rest, and now I think I'll have a little change."

"I'd just like to know how many girls you made love to before you met me?" said the wife during a quarrel.

"Twelve," groaned hubby. "But I forgot to count them until it was too late."

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

As they arrived at Quebec on May 17 to the bands playing and populace singing God Save the King, so did Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth depart from Halifax on Thursday aboard the Empress of Britain with a choir of 600 on the shore of the harbor singing the National Anthem. Throughout the tour the noble strains of God Save King were heard several times daily by millions of people and the tune, which may have been taken for granted by many before, now means something to them which expresses their deep loylaty to the British Empire. The fact that the tune has survived throughout the ages is proof of its merit, as nothing has come along to supplant it, even though many stirring patriotic songs have been written. Played at the recognized British army tempo and with a proper arrangement, instead of having it played "everyman for himself" the tune is noble, expressive and stirring. Certainly, it has taken on renewed popularity, both as to melodic appeal and all that it stands for.

It was a happy thought that prompted the bandmaster at the New York World's Fair, during the Royal Visit there, to play My Beautiful Lady, as Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth came into view. The Queen captivated all by her beauty and gracious charm of manner and the lilting melody composed by the late Ivan Caryll and the expressive words of the song, in praise of a beautiful lady, well fitted the occasion. Another tune that fitted the occasion was Irving Berlin's A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody—that haunts you night and day.

Mention of My Beautiful Lady carries one back through the years. It was one of the most popular songs from the light opera The Pink Lady, written by the late C.M.S. McLellan and composed by Ivan Caryll. It was first produced in New York, in 1911, with the lovely Hazel Dawn in the title role. Later the opera captivated London. The waltz hit of the show was one of the most favored songs of its day. It has never disappeared from favor, as its melody is ever welcome, both in its lilt for dancng and its own ingratiating appeal. No doubt it will enjoy a well-merited new lease of life as a result of Her Majesty's visit.

Associations such as are formed by songs like My Beautiful Lady go on forever. Under similar circumstances to those prevailing when The Queen visited the World's Fair, it will always be played and where, perhaps, a more classical melody might just fail to put over the musical feature of such an event, a tune the public has known and loved for many years will fill the bill to perfection, as this one did.

Edmontonians will be pleased that several of this city's musicians are once more providing the music at Jasper Park lodge for the summer season. Joe De Courcy's orchestra, which played at the lodge last season and which, during the previous winter had played at the Macdonald hotel here, is again installed at Jasper, having opened there Thursday night. In addition to Mr. De Courcy, the orchestra includes Mark Mortimer, Ralph "Tubby" Mumford, Chester Lambertson, Edward Kirkwood, Charles Windsor, Frank McCleavey, David McConachie and Tom Gibbs. Wally Coster is the vocalist. Check over these names and practically all will be rembered and recognized as well known Edmonton instrumentalists. Their work at Jasper during the summer will be watched with interest.

This writer encountered Mark Mortimer on Jasper avenue during a brief stop over he made on the way to Jasper. Mark said the boys were all fine and felt they were set for a good season. He also brought tidings of Tom Gardner, whose work as violinist teacher and conductor here stand forth brightly. Mr. Gardner is now associated with CBC programs in Winnipeg as a violinist and is playing with the various orchestras conducted by Geoffrey Waddington. Mr. Gardner should prove a valuable addition to the CBC orchestral forces. In training, experience, capacity, musicianship and temperament he stands high musically and it is to be hoped his talents will be fully recognized. His work in conducting several originations here won him wide renown.

Over at the University of Alberta, interest is reported very strong in the master course in piano, to be given under auspices of the extension department, of Jacques Jolas from July 17 to 29. It is felt, stated extension department officials, that there are a number of students in the country who would obtain much inspiration from this course and it would be greatly appreciated by those in the city as well. Mr. Jolas is an American born musician but spent his youth in Alsace-Lorraine, where he received his early training. He has made extensive recital tours in Europe and both Viennese and Parisian critics have saluted him as a worthy exponent of contemporary music. For the last eight years he has been affiliated with the Juilliard Foundation of New York. His intimate knowledge of piano literature should make his contribution to the course this year of great interest to serious teachers and students alike. His master classes will include piano playing, technique and pedagogy.

Sir Thomas Beecham, opera and symphony orchestra conductor and composer, in an interview in London on June 12 expressed his intention of spending the next few years away from England "for reasons both of health and preservation of my sanity." Sir Thomas said he proposes to carry on the opera at Covent Garden next season but will not conduct it. Sir Thomas used to operate his own company in England and the Beecham Opera Company, with Sir Thomas as chief executive and conductor, won widespread fame.

"I shall do what I can to give the public an opera season, although frankly I do not think it deserves one," he said. "Its support this season has been entirely inadequate, but I attribute that less to its want or musical enthusiasm than to its condition of moral collapse. I do not despair, however. Sooner or later this country will recover its sanity. I shall spend part of my time for the next few years out of this country, for reasons both of health and preservation of my sanity. I shall be conducting no concerts."

Sir Thomas is entitled to his own opinions and always was a little outspoken. In view of the fact that London shares with New York the distinction of being the leading music centre of the world today, it is unlikely that Sir Thomas will stay away for artistic reasons. Maybe it is only his health that requires the rest. Also, it's a safe bet that if Sir Thomas got an invitation to conduct, say, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra for a few concerts, he would accept with alacrity. And who would not?

Rehearsals are under way for the production next fall by the Edmonton Civic Opera Society, of Georges Bizet's opera Carmen. Under the musical supervision of Mrs. James B. Carmichael, music director of the society, work on preparation of the music is proceeding rapidly. Rehearsals will be carried on until the end of the current month. During July and August the company will lay off and will convene again in September.

For the production, Dorothy Blackwell, who sang the title role when the society first produced Carmen several years ago, will return and sing the role of the devastating Spanish girl. Joe Nadeau who has carried most of the leading tenor roles in the last few seasons, will be cast as the dashing, lovelorn and finally forsaken Don Jose. Other leading members of the society will be heard in suitale roles. Mrs. Carmichael states that as many opportunities as possible are being developed to give members of the organization a chance.

When Carmen is once more written into the records, the society will turn its attention to preparing Blossom Time for the spring production in 1940. With music adapted by the ubiquitous, indefatigable Sigmund Romberg from the inexhaustible store of Schubert's melody, this operetta in dramatic and melodic appeal, takes its place with the best.

PROVINCIAL BRIEFS

LACOMBE

DOMINION FARM WILL BE SCENE BREEDERS' MEET

The annual field day of the Alberta Clydesdale Breeders' Association will be held at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, on Saturday, June 24th.

An interesting feature of the program will be a competition in washing, grooming, decorating and showing horses. This will be open to boys 20 years old and under. Prizes of $5, $3, $2 and $1, will be awarded. Horses, raffia, ribbons and rosettes will be provided. Those entering the competition may start preparing their horses at ten o'clock, and should be through at twelve. The competition will be judged after the parade. If you do not compete this year, come and learn how from experts.

PARADE

At 1:30 a parade will be held of 40 Clydesdales owned by the Experimental Station. This will be led by the imported Clydesdale stallion, Strathmore James, followed by two six-horse teams, several two-horse teams, and breeding stock on halters.

HOW IT'S DONE

After the parade and the competition, demonstrations will be given on proper type and judging of Clydesdales, by expert judges. Several interesting classes will be judged with full discussions of the reasons for the placings. These and addresses by prominent horsemen, will provide much valuable information, particularly for young judges.

The hedges, flowering shrubs and early perennials are at their best. Men will be on hand to answer questions about all departments of the work of the station. There will be many opportunities for taking interesting photos. Tea, coffee, cups, cream and sugar will be provided by the Experimental Station.

WETASKIWIN

A meeting of the Wetaskiwin Board of Trade and Kiwanis Club will be held at Lone Ridge Hall on Wednesday afternoon, June 21st at four p.m. Between four and six o'clock there will be a softball game between town and country teams. At six p.m. a luncheon will be served and a speaker from the University of Alberta will address the meeting. This gathering is being arranged to promote more friendly relations between town and country.

SYLVAN LAKE

Following two years spent in Europe during which she visited Austria, Germany and Italy, Miss Augusta Heinrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Heinrich of Sylvan Lake and a former teacher here, returned home this week. During her stay in Europe she acted as tutor for a few months for the family of a leading Italian financier. She was an eye witness of many of the military events staged by Mussolini in Rome. She is 22 years of age.

JASPER

Ski History Made As Icy Athabaska Topped By Austrian

Benno Rybizka, famous skier, formerly of St. Anton am Arlberg, Austrian Tyrol, and now head of the Hannes Schneider Ski School of North Conway and Jackson N. H. made ski history in Jasper Park last Friday by making the first ski ascent of Mt. Athabasca, one of the mighty guardian peaks of the Columbia Icefields.

This giant of the Rockies, which towers well over 11,000 feet, was conquered by the master skier after five hours of stiff climbing. But it only took 35 minutes to make the swift run down over the snow and ice hung slopes of the mountain to the foot of the perpetual ice of the Glacier.

"One of the most thrilling runs I have ever made," was Rybika's enthusiastic report on his return to the Icefield Chalet late that afternoon. "A region is here," said Rybizka, "that is the finest for summer skiing I have ever seen."

Once it took a week to reach this region by pack train from Jasper town, but now, over a scenic motor highway, famous the world over, it is possible to drive to the very edge of the living ice within a few hours.

WETASKIWIN

The monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Wetaskiwin School Division No. 36 was held in the Divisional Office on Thursday. Mr. Scoffield reported on his work in connection with the Sandholm and Spring Hills districts. Further investigation with regard to the number of pupils desiring school accommodation will be made, and it appears likely that a satisfactory arrangement of the present school facilities will be accomplished.

The building committee reported the engagement of Carl Sherback as foreman for the construction of the Bulyea school. It was decided to engage W. L. Trueman of Red Deer, as auditor of the books of the Division for the current year.

WESTLOCK

The Westlock Lions Club held their regular meeting Tuesday night, a special feature of the evening being moving pictures of beauty spots in Alberta's National Parks, presented by Lion E. G. Wood.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, J. H. Buchanan; first vice president, Don Stanton; second vice president, Rev. Fr. Rooney; third vice president, H. Ray Hide; secretary, M. G. H. Gardam; treasurer, J. Renaud. Directors, E. G. Wood, H. G. Curlett, A. Lindahl and P. Holtan.

NORTH RED DEER

Ralph Wilkins, Poplar Ridge, had a rib broken, when a horse he was attempting to catch reared up and knocked him down, the horse's front feet landing on him.

Over three inches of rain has fallen here during the last week. Cutworms are causing considerable damage to gardens and fields in the district.

William Baranurk, C.N.R. section man, North Red Deer, is in the Municipal Hospital, with three fractured ribs. He was riding on a speeder, and when he saw a train approaching, jumped, injuring and bruising himself. The speeder was completely wrecked.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF ALBERTA YOUNG PEOPLE

Boys' Field Day

It was a field day for the boys from Bishop's College School of Lennoxville, who went to Sherbrooke armed with cameras to record the Royal visit.

Royal Visit Is Landmark In History Of Boy Scouts

The Alberta Supplement to the "Scout Leader" monthly Dominion Headquarters publication, aptly describes the King's visit as an inspiration to Scouts and Scouters of Alberta and records that flowing with the tide of a renewed enthusium the movement has been carried to new heights within the last few months. Every branch of the movement made striking improvements in discipline and appearance, more proficiency badges were won than in any similar period and a record peak of 47 King Scouts qualified for the special Royal Visit King's Scout certificate.

MEMBERSHIP BOOSTED

Membership also was boosted in Cub, Scout and Rover ranks and as the end of 1939 marks the completion of the Welcome B.P. Campaign the Alberta "Bessborough Pledge" to increase the invested membership to 10,000 Scouts is fast approaching realization. This vital and important Royal visit impetus coupled with the noteworthy service rendered by the Scout movement at that time is certain to be recorded as a landmark in the province's Scouting history and to be remembered by all who took part in the momentous welcome ceremonies.

JAMBOREE

Also included in the supplement is the summary of the highlights of the Provincial Jamboree, August 16 to 23 for which an official program will be printed some time before the end of June. Commissioner Woods will conduct the official opening of the Jamboree on Thursday, August 17 at Camp Woods around the shore of Sylvan Lake.

On Friday a Scout craft competition will be featured providing opportunity for various attending Scout troops to display their abilities in signalling, first aid and similar outdoor contests.

FEATURES

Rehearsal for the welcome rally is to be held on the following Saturday while the nominal church service together with a undenominational Scouts Own at which his Hon. the Lieut. Governor J. C. Bowen will be present, will be held Sunday. A major event of the Jamboree will be the arrival of Sir P. Everett and a special welcome of spectacular proportions will greet him when he steps from his plane in preparation to inspect the camp.

Church Players At Highlands To Present Drama

One of the best religious dramas written by Dorothy Clarke Wilson, "For He Had Great Possessions", will be presented by the Highlands United Church players under the direction of Rev. J. W. Smith in the church auditorium at 9 p.m., June 25.

The play is the story of Ben Azel, a rich young man of Jericho who refused the challenge of Christ, and how through sorrow he attempted to make amends. The closing scene of the play depicts a triumph of faith that cannot help but move all who witness it.

Plan Annual Camp

The Second St. Faith's Cub Pack are planning a semi-annual camp for Sixers and Seconds of the pack to be staged on June 24 at the camping grounds at Cooking Lake. Camps are held both in the early summer and fall and give the older cubs an opportunity to be initiated into the outdoor lore of campcraft. Cubs will join with other members of the Scout troop of St. Faiths at a special open air service to be conducted by Canon Clough this Sunday.

ALWAYS ENCLOSE A STAMPED, ADDRESSED ENVELOPE

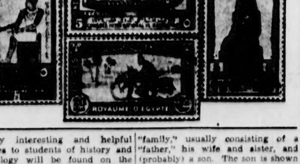
Address all correspondence to: The Director, Stamp Collectors' Club, The Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

For some years The Bulletin has made possible guidance in the hobby of an internationally known philatelic expert, who is at your service to advise regarding your problems.

YOU are welcome in membership. State your age, size of collection and what stamps are of special interest to you. Enclose postage for reply always. You will receive a membership card and some stamps for your collection.

INTERESTING EGYPTIAN ISSUES

While Egypt is an independent kingdom and not a part of the British Commonwealth of Nations, most collectors include the stamp issues of the country with those of the British Empire owing to the fact that it was a British Protectorate from 1914 until 1922, and, with the condominion of the two countries over the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan since 1899, British interests in Egypt have been great.



Many interesting and helpful pictures to students of history and archeology will be found on the stamp issues of Egypt, examples of certain issues being pictured today.

The stamp at the left is the 5m. value of the Medical Congress Issue of 1928, and pictures Imhotep, one of the three great gods of the city of Memphis, at one time the capital of ancient Egypt. Ptah was the principal god, and formed a triad with the goddess, Sekhet, and Imhotep. This ancient religion differed from that of the Greeks, where each god was honored in a separate temple. Each Egyptian divinity was accompanied by a "family," usually consisting of a "father," his wife and sister, and (probably) a son. The son is shown on the stamp mentioned above.

A set of three stamps was issued in 1927 in connection with the Statistical Congress, and the stamp at the right, above, is the 5m. value, showing a statue of Amenhotep, a king of Egypt (about 1700 B.C.) of the 18th dynasty. The country was at the height of her glory during his reign, magnificent buildings being in course of construction at the city of Thebes.

Three stamps, of the same design, were issued in 1926 to commemorate the Navigation Congress, and the stamp at top, centre, shows an ancient Egyptian Galley.

The stamp below shows a more modern picture of a motorcycle postman of Egypt, used for carrying special delivery letters. There were two issues of this stamp, which was for use on mail for "Special Delivery," the first being dark green in color (issued in 1926), and the other being changed to brown-red and black, issued in 1929.

There are many other interesting stamps, which are of as much interest to the average person as to any collector of stamps. Reading done in connection with such stamps is an education in itself and will prove intensely interesting. If you have not tried the library for data regarding the stamps in your collection, you are missing much of the pleasure of the hobby.

Edmonton High School Students Are Bulletin Correspondents

WESTMOUNT

By Bert Nightingale

Following a series of postponements, caused by unsettled weather conditions, the Westmount Debating club held its annual hike Saturday. A group of about ten students tramped to Capitol Hill early in the afternoon. Jean Ball, president, was not slow in getting activities underway—one party was sent out to secure wood, another made the site ready, and so forth!

About four o'clock in the afternoon Mr. Shaw, under whose jurisdiction the club has been functioning all year, and Mrs. Shaw, arrived. Then a "rough and ready" camp supper was "demolished," following which a sing-song floated into the pine trees from the group around the big bon-fire. The hike was an outstanding success.

Westmount talent has again come to the fore! At the Macdonald hotel Friday Nolan Henderson entertained with his violin at a buffet supper held in honor of a group of teachers. Nolan rendered several numbers, all of which were well received.

VICTORIA

By Gordon Brown

Members of the Argosy staff were rewarded Monday evening for their work this year with a luncheon at the Purple Lantern. A discussion of ways and means of improving the paper followed chop suey and Miss L. E. Maguire was presented with a pair of gloves for her invaluable assistance.

Three members of the staff — Harry Hole, Harold Kline and Bryce Rohrer—are to be recommended for membership in the Quill and Scroll society for high school journalists.

Vic soccer players managed to keep supremacy in that field within the school's walls when Tuesday they defeated Commercial 4-0 in the last scheduled game. As no finals are being staged, the Vic team takes the cup as it is on top of the league with twelve out of the possible sixteen points.

In the House softball leagues, play-offs are now underway. In the girls' section teams of Ellen and Causgrove are to meet for the right to match Slevinski, while in the boys' division completion of the schedule finds Phil Myers' nine on top and hot favorites for the honors.

Home Loving, Sleepy Butch Just An Old Meany At Heart: Frightens Little Baby Robin

Butch, conveniently called a wire-haired terrier because he resembles same, is a dog with imagination. The claim that his owners make as to his terrier parentage is one which might quite easily be disputed. But whether or not he is purebred has little bearing on the story. The fact is that Butch possesses an imaginative quality which is manifest in few other canines.

Butch, one might say, is a might eccentric. He does queer things. But the strange little idiosyncracies which prompt his actions have not, as yet, affected his health nor his appetite, nor in any other way left any distinguishable mark upon him. The strangeness about Butch seems to be fixed only in his mind.

HOME LOVING

Butch is home loving and he likes to sleep when he is in the house. He is well-behaved when he is in the house. He is well-behaved when he is strolling with his master and his mistress. Naturally, he, like other dogs, has doglike traits and mannerisms which are the heritage of all those creatures of the canine family. For instance, he evinces a normal hatred of cats.

Butch

It is when he is alone, that the other Butch comes out. It seems quite reasonable to assume that Butch may have inhibitions and that it is only when he is alone that he can throw off those inhibitory chains. His actions, when he thinks he is by himself, point strongly to this fact.

THE INCIDENT

An incident, which graphically illustrates the point, occurred the other day, when Butch was allowed to run in his fenced-in backyard.

Butch was inclined to restlessness on this particular day and conveyed to his mistress as best he could that he would enjoy taking a few turns around the yard. The door was thrown open and he was permitted to step out.

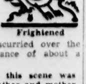
Butch was in the yard for only a few minutes when he discovered something that claimed his interest. He found a baby robin that had been thrown out of the nest by its father, who thought it high time that his off-spring be taught the rudiments of flight.

The baby bird fascinated Butch. With no fear or embarrassment whatsoever, he studied the bird intently, it being as far as can be determined, his first experience of such a nature. As can be well imagined, the baby robin was terror-stricken and crouched low in the sparse grass to make himself as unnoticeable as possible. The bird didn't move a pin-feather.

GROWS BOLDER

His first wave of curiosity past, the small dog grew bolder and decided on some practical experiments. He stepped nearer the object of his interest and sniffed it. He seemed to nod his bushy head in approval. Then he sat on his haunches and eyed it again, his funny face wrinkled in thought.

Seemingly having arrived at a decision, Butch moved over and nudged the feather creature with his moist, black nose. The bird twitched. This took Butch slightly aback but, more than that, it whetted his curiosity more. He nudged the robin again and the frightened bird scurried over the grass for a distance of about a foot.



Frightened

All the while this scene was being enacted, father and mother robin were filling the air with dire threats aimed at the curious canine. Butch paid not the least attention to them, all his interest being centered on his find.

The sight of the little bird scurrying awkwardly in a wavy course pleased the dog no end. When it came to a stop he would nudge it again and the poor bewildered little bird would wobble over the ground for another foot or so. It was cruel and yet it was amusing. Amusing so long as Butch didn't harm the robin.

KEEP AWAY

Butch's mistress, who was standing on the sidelines filled with deep concern, ventured at first to grasp the terrier's collar. Butch would have none of it, however, and straddled the bird while he uttered a low growl. He would brook no interference.

Deeming it best to leave the pair alone lest the smaller of them be gulped in one mouthful, the dog's mistress stood waiting her chance to dash in and snatch the robin away.

Unmolested, Butch went on with his game. When the robin reached the end of the short yard coaxed by the dog in a series of short spurts, Butch would reverse directions and the strange touch and spurt act would move to the other end of the yard. Three complete crossings were made before the fat, feathered half of the act, its tiny yellow legs bowed, its beak scraping the earth, and its breath coming in short and audible gasps, slumped to the ground in complete exhaustion.

Mother and Father Robin were very, very angry.

Butch, delighted by the game, nudged and rolled the bird that showed symptoms of being on the verge of a heart attack. Prepared for the worst and not caring much, the baby bird lay like a clod of earth. This keenly disappointed Butch who could have gone on for hours.

ALL IN VAIN

Following another round of vain attempts to rouse the panting bundle of feathers, Butch whined and looked appealingly in the direction of his mistress who was sneaking up on the pair. This time he welcomed a little help.

Why his friend—Butch now to all appearances regarded the bird as a pal—had so unceremoniously tossed in the towel, was puzzling to the dog. He couldn't understand.

At any rate, the game was over. Butch seemed to sense it and stood respectfully aside while his mistress tenderly lifted the now bow-legged bird and inspected it closely for signs of life and injury. The little fellow was apparently all in one piece, and aside from shock and exhaustion had suffered little.

SAFELY HOME

The bird was held for a short while until it had recovered sufficiently to be placed back in the home nest. When it was safely tucked down, glad to be back home, the mother and father robin immediately rushed back to their suffering son and seemed to administer bird first aid. Their joy at having their offspring home unscathed was, however, overshadowed by their grave concern.

As for Butch, he just went back to his favorite shady spot and sat sniffing. He needed inspiration.

The Yankees went into one of their slumps up at Boston on Memorial Day. They dropped the first game of a double-header.

1939 Publication Contains Many New, Interesting Features

Marking a long stride in journalistic history at Eastwood high school, Albert Ciz and Doris Newland, co-editors of the "Eastwood Gazette", together with a staff of 14 students, presented the graduation edition of the school paper. The publication is worthy of high rating in the field of high school editions.

For the first time in the history of the school separate graduation pictures were published, replacing the old group pictures. The fine publication also contains pictures of the various athletic teams, school clubs, staff and pictures taken around the campus.

LARGER.

Printed on gloss paper, the Gazette is bound with a heavy blue cover, an innovation over past years. The 1939 graduation edition contains several more pages than last year, giving the staff a chance to cover the year's activities to better advantage.

Special appreciation is expressed in the paper for the work and help of Miss J. R. Howard, staff adviser. Miss Howard took the greater number of pictures appearing in the publication, while the Gazette staff found Miss Howard's advice invaluable.

Of particular interest is the dramatic page, an addition to the paper from last year. The page contains a full-width picture showing scenes from one of the plays produced during the year, and separate pictures of the school orchestra and the production staff.

IMPRESSIVE

Cover design of the special edition is plain but impressive. Background is done in a blue shade with three gold lines on each side of the page running from top to bottom, while at top centre a shield is outlined engraved on which are the letters E. H. S. At bottom centre of the page is 1939, also in gold. It was designed by Peter Ropinchuk and Marjorie Smith.

Annuals of Eastwood will long recall the 1939 graduation edition of the Gazette as one of the outstanding achievements of the school for that year.

PHOTOGRAPHING PETS IS NEXT CLUB PROJECT

By CAMFAN

A tricky photographic job will be found in attempting to snapshot goldfish. Of course the use of flat sided aquaria will simplify matters but when that is impossible an alternative would be to place the round fish-bowl in a rectangular jar and fill the space between with water or preferably some liquid of higher refractive index such as a glycerin solution. Of course there is no need of trying anything so difficult—an interesting picture can be made much more easily of kittens, pups, your old dog doing tricks or of many other pets. But most important to remember is that the best will receive a prize of $2.00 while other prizes of $1.00 will help you buy more film or a better camera.

BETTER SNAPSHOTS

Flat, muddy-looking prints are the product of a dirty lense, lack of a lense-hood, or poor choice of printing paper. Inasmuch as the latter fault is not so readily controllable our suggestion for really much better snapshots is:

Keep your lens shaded from direct light. The memory of the visibility you don't have when driving against the sun behind a dirty windshield should illustrate the point as well taken. When taking pictures against the sun stand so that the shadow of a nearby tree or lamp post falls across the camera lens to prevent glare. In an emergency case your hat may be used for the purpose—but with caution.

CAMERA CLUB

An illustrated lecture from Canadian Kodak entertained the members of the Edmonton Camera Club on Tuesday, June 13, in presenting a rather novel idea—a photographic autobiography. This is an interesting idea for young parents to undertake so that when the child becomes sufficiently mature to use a camera the groundwork will be available.

Election of officers for the session 1939-40 was the most important feature of the evening, the results being as follows: President, T. B. Richards; vice president, Dorothy Browning, B.Sc.; secretary treasurer, Ken Pennifold. An executive in addition of four members: C. T. Hustwick, R. Wood, Miss Amelia Chabon, W. R. Settle. Meetings will be resumed in September after a summer vacation period during July and August.

When light falls on anything it may be: First, completely reflected—the object appears black; second, completely reflected—the object appears the same color as the light illuminating it (usually white); third, partly absorbed, partly reflected—in white light the object appears colored; fourth, pass through almost completely—as in case of water, or glass.

Supervises Course

Boy Scout provincial secretary Mr. Backman is at present visiting in Red Deer, where he is supervising a Scoutmaster training course which is being conducted by officials of that district. The course will conclude with a week end visit to Camp Woods and programs and arrangements have been organized by district commissioner J. N. Castle.

Outstanding Year Book Published at McDougall School

One of the finest high school year books published in Edmonton in several years, "The Comet", published by the students of McDougall Commercial high school is now in the hands of the students. In order that this fine edition might be given a review somewhat in keeping with its worth, story of the year book is being held until next week, when it will appear on this page.—EDITOR.

Fifty-Seven Cubs Pass Athletic Tests

A Cub rally at the South Side Athletic park Monday night tested Cubs from all over the city in their athletic skill and resulted in qualifying 57 of the 82 entrants for their athletic badge. The course was greeted with nearly double the attendance of any previous year and was directed by Chas. Rowsell, district Cub master. The program included a variety of the outdoor events based on tests pertaining to second star proficiency athletic badge.

May Form Troop

Formation of a Scout troop at Stony Plain is being contemplated and recently a committee was appointed to approach the Masonic Lodge with a view to obtaining their sponsoring for the troop. This will be the inaugural organization to be organized in that town flying the Scout colors and it is expected that committee members W. L. Sharpland, F. W. Yates and Dr. R. Oatway will soon have the troop under full strength.

AUTOGRAPH FANS HAVE BUSY WEEK GETTING NAMES

By DOROTHY ROBB

Autograph hounds have been busy all week collecting signatures in their Year Books. Speaking of Year Books, if any of the old Commercial graduates would like a copy, all they have to do is to phone the school and the circulation manager will see that it is delivered to you promptly.

A number of extra copies were printed for this purpose, so if you would like one, order it right away.

On Friday afternoon a special treat was served to the students. It was a "Commercial Special Sundae." Those who brought their lunch could have theirs at noon, the others were served at four.

On Thursday the students gathered in the Assembly hall to hear the farewell broadcast of Their Majesties. In the afternoon some of the rooms went to see the picture at the Capitol. This was possible through the kindness of the theatre in giving them a special rate.

Students Cramming After St. Joseph's Graduation Dance

By RENE BOILEAU

The students are back at hard work this week, after spending last week in preparing for the graduation dance, which was held at the Silver Glade last Friday evening. Besides holding fond memories of this pleasant affair, the graduates are now sporting gold graduation pins which were presented to them at the dance.

With the exams just around the corner, and the boys earnestly studying, there has been little time for extra-curricular activities.

Conservationists report that many wild ducks are striking up friendly relations with men—thus escaping hunters' bullets. It's no fun to shoot a bird that perches on the rifle barrel and makes eyes at you.

Spankie School Presents 1939 Dance Revue

CURTAIN of the years was drawn back for a brief hour or two on Friday evening in the Empire Theatre as through an interpretation of Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird", presented by the Mary Spankie School of Dancing, patrons were whisked back to the enchanted land of childhood. Presented to a near-capacity house the revue was the culmination of many weeks of careful preparation and practice and is a tribute to the ingenuity and patience of the director, Mrs. Spankie, as well as to the talent of the participants.

TALE OF CHILDHOOD

The tale is a graceful and lovely unfolding of the dreams and beliefs of childhood, when fairies and goblins frolic merrily in the forest green, when star-persons twinkle through merry little dances and the spirits of all things, both animate and inanimate come to life and play about. It tells of the search of two children, Mytyl and Tyltyl for the blue bird of happiness, of their trip to the Palace of the Night, and to the Garden of Happiness.

Presented through the media of dancing, dialogue and singing, the revue was one of the most colorful and charming of recent presentations.

A wand is waved by the visitor-fairy, Fairy Berylune, the magic cap is placed on the head of Tyltyl and things begin to happen. How they trip off out into the night, with their newly found companions, spirits of the cat, the dog, the spirits of sugar, milk, water, the merry loaf of bread and the lovely spirit of Light, and find a magic world at their feet is the unfolding of the story. Earth cares are forgotten as they meet star spirits, and spirits of all things both harmful and good, and finally capture the happiness blue bird and realize where the beauty and truth of childhood and life lies.

INTO FIVE PARTS

The revue, to follow closely the story, was divided into five acts, and presented the pupils of the school—eighty to one hundred strong in the many phases of dancing instruction and physical education taught in the school. The graceful ballet, the snappy tap-dance, the sweeping waltz, and the acrobatic routine, all found a place on the well proportioned program. Costumes of the dancers—flames, dew-drops, perfumes, fireflies, wood nymphs were pretty and delightful and proved to be constantly interesting to the patrons in the theatre.

Mrs. Spankie was present to direct the presentation and pianists were Miss Dilys Rankin, A.T.C.M. and Mr. Roy F. Buckham. Richard and Inez MacDonald were responsible for the clever make-up.

PERSONNEL OF CAST

Leads were taken by Doreen Stewart, as Mytyl, Thomas La Brier as Tyltyl, Margaret Sheeran as the fairy; Fergus MacKenzie as bread; Leslie Johnston, fire; Arthur Johnston, the dog; Aileen Rankin, the cat; Aline Carmichael, water; Beckly LaBrier, milk; Bill Cairms, sugar, and Beth Neale, as Light.

Others taking part in the presentation were Nancy Pascol, Beth Haight, Freddie and Elroy Haight, Betty and Rita Jacobs, Marjorie Hamilton, Joyce Butcher, Jean McNeilly, Caryl tewart, Barbara Eagle, Barbara Buckham, Pat Ranche, Marjorie Bordian, Jean McDougall.

How Important Is Father In Your House?

When the children are small it's mother's business to draw dad, their nearest of playmates and advisors, into their plans and develop confidence and affection between them.

TIME was when father was all-important in the American household. He was protector, proprietor, judge, jury, executioner, banker, manager, caterer; his was the last indisputable authority and his word was actually law.

Husbands a generation or two in the past could whip their wives, whip their grown daughters, thrash and disinherit their sons, sell or banish their small children and will away their unborn babies. They could send anyone away from the table at the slightest reason for displeasure; they could bring their illegitimate children serenely in to the home circle, sure that they would have a welcome and a mother's care from the lady of the house.

At the moment I am reading the biography of a certain brilliant and once-prominent American woman in which she relates that when her father came home late at night, intoxicated, to receive a bad report from the mother of one or more children, he awakened those children and cross-examined them and whipped them "for hours." To a sobbing and shivering child of eight, says the biographer, he would shout: "Don't you dare go to bed! You're going to catch it again as soon as I'm through with your brothers!"

Just what sort of mother would expose her offspring to this tender fatherly correction is an interesting speculation, but this girl's mother evidently thought it her duty to do so.

My own grandfather told me his father always did the marketing on his way to his office. What he sent home the women cooked, and if the six daughters of the family had any plans for an innocent walk or outing or home employment the mischievous old man used to take care that berries for picking and preserving, or a whole sack of peas for shelling, went home that morning, to throw the women of the household into despair. This same despotic ruler of a household of 11 women and one son came home more than once to find his girls revelling in the weekly installment of one of Mr. Dickens' enchanting serials. It amused him to tear out half of an unread page to light his pipe, even though the girls were careful to supply him with spills for that purpose.

THAT DESPOTISM IS GONE

Well, somehow that proud estate has been taken away from the male of the species. A thousand industrial and social causes are responsible for the change; women have perforce become breadwinners and so have tasted the heady wine of financial independence; frontiers have narrowed, and the all powerful pioneer finds himself a mere cog in a tremendous industrial plant and is thereby silenced and humbled. And also, I like to believe, civilization has moved just a fraction nearer the realization of a Christian ideal.

Children aren't beaten any more, or sent away from the table, or snubbed and humiliated. School principals may no longer flog; nervous maiden aunts no longer sit in trembling silence under dear Herbert's unfeeling jeers; wives no longer nervously ask for just a few dollars for shoes and "perhaps having my poplin made over."

And, as usual, the pendulum has swung too far the other way; and when a pretty girl sings that her heart belongs to daddy she doesn't mean her father any more! Just exactly what she does mean is quite outside the range of this article. What I'm asking today is a little more recognition of daddy, his rights, his comfort, his importance.

Today is Fathers' Day. We've long had a day that glorifies mothers, and thousands of loving hearts have been warmed by it. Here is our chance to show dad that he is beloved, too, that his children appreciate that it is a long task to raise sons and daughters, a task that requires sacrifice not only of money and time and strength and pleasure, but calls upon all that two human beings have of generosity and patience and love. Just inasmuch as your father showed you these qualities, you owe him a tribute today that will show him you have not forgotten.

MOST MEN LOVE BABIES

When you were very small there is no question that he adored you. Almost all men love babies, even though very few men today are given any share in the fun of caring for them in their tiny days. But after those days come the long years when it was dad who thought about your teeth and tonsils, and paid doctors for their care, who bought you skates and a scooter; who took you to the circus and to ball games. It was dad who wanted his little girls to have what the other girls had, and to wear what the other girls wore; dad who telephoned home when any one of the children was sick, and who worried through many a winter day in a dull office, thinking of a hot little hand that touched his, and a sore little mouth too sick to smile him a good-bye.

In these days not enough credit is given him for what he feels. He isn't encouraged by his own mother in his youth, and by his wife when his children are born, to play his rightful part. Too often the woman and the children gang on dad; they keep things from him; they conspire to squeeze him slowly out of their intimate little circle.

The wife who does this is working against her own happiness and security. She is teaching her sons and daughters to destroy their own married lives; to ruin by mockery and selfish stupidity what ought to be their most sacred and valuable relationship.

Shorn of the powers he once had, deprived by his own common sense of the right as well as the inclination to beat and bully his family, yet the husband and father still has a part to play, and only a short-sighted wife will deprive him of it. For her children will grow up and drift away long before she is ready to spare them, and unless she has built a solid foundation of companionship under her husband and herself, her life will then be bereft indeed, and it will be too late to change it.

LET DAD SHARE CONFIDENCES

It's her business, now, when the children are small, to draw this best and nearest of their playmates and advisors into their plans, to develop confidence and affection between them. If dad is worried about money then it is obligatory on mother to see that that worry is ended. If he thinks his 17-year-old has too much freedom, then that girl owes him a full explanation of what she is doing and a deference to his wishes about her. If he sometimes seems to his son old-fashioned and narrow, then that son may well remember that all sons have felt that for all fathers since the days of Adam and Cain.

A fellow-writer, Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, of Spokane, Washington, put Fathers' Day upon our national heart map, in honor of her own beloved father, William Smart, a Civil War veteran, who brought up a motherless family. In doing my bit for this cause this morning I like to think that I am honoring another father, too, a quiet, book-loving, child-loving country banker whose bewildered children lost his loving care 39 years ago. To both these good fathers and to thousands of others all over America and all over Heaven we daughters say this morning: "Thank you and God bless you!"

Summer Social Hour Is Fine Hot-Weather Idea

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Take a glass of iced tea or coffee, a dish of warm coffee cake, a table on the porch or under a tree on the lawn, and a few friends. Combine into a social hour. That's a recipe for hot weather contentment.

SOUR MILK COFFEE CAKE

One cup sour top milk, ½ teaspoon soda, 2 eggs, 1½ cups sifted flour, 1 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ⅛ teaspoon salt.

For topping: powdered sugar, cinnamon, butter and finely chopped nuts.

Combine top milk, soda and eggs. Beat well. Sift the sifted flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Add to top milk batter. Beat mixture until smooth. Grease a shallow baking pan and pour in batter. Bake in moderate oven (350 de. Fg.) for about 30 minutes. Sprinkle top with butter, sugar, cinnamon and nut meats while still hot.

BISMARK TEA RING

Two cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons combination baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening, ¾ cup milk, ½ cup raspberry jam.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually, stirring until soft dough is formed. Turn out on slightly floured board and knead 30 seconds, or enough to shape.

Roll into an oblong sheet, ⅛ inch thick. Spread evenly with raspberry jam. Roll as for jelly roll; bring edges together to form ring and place on baking sheet, covered with greased brown paper.

With scissors, cut 1-inch slices almost through the ring, turning each slice cut-side up and pointing outer edge. Brush with melted butter. Bake in hot oven (400 deg. F.) for 30 minutes, or until done.

Cover with glaze made of 1 cup sifted confectioner's sugar, 2 tablespoons milk and 2 tablespoons raspberry jam. Spread glaze on hot cake. Serve warm.

Tomorrow's Menu

FATHER'S DAY DINNER: Fresh fruit cup, roast prime beef, horseradish, brown gravy, mashed potatoes, new peas, mixed green salad, fresh strawberry ice cream, chocolate layer cake, coffee, milk.

SUPPER: Consomme in cups, toasted crackers, Bismark tea ring, assorted cheese, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

Raising A Family

When Jimmy and Molly begin to quarrel during vacation, and run in with tales about their playmates, loll about and whine that they have nothing to do, we should know instantly that the trouble is not with them, altogether, but due to boredom.

O. R. Barton

It is very hard indeed for a busy mother to stop and show the children how to entertain themselves, but perhaps that would be easier on her nerves than constant bickering and complaining.

So it is well worth a lot of trouble for parents to help the small fry to plan their days. The swing and sliding board have lost their appeal. The bicycle lies inert on the lawn.

STIMULATE IMAGINATIONS

Now is the time for all good mothers and true to come to the aid of the parties sitting chin in hand and looking as though the end of life had come. Imagination is the keynote to interest. It is the very backbone of play.

Let the children dress up and play make-believe. They will know what to do once they step into another role. Old clothes of almost any kind will do. Let them go the limit, with make-up and feathers, high-heeled shoes and what not. The neighborhood children will probably reciprocate if they are asked to join in the fun today. The round of dress-up affairs should last a week or two.

I think that one of the best investments any mother can make is a book on games for children. Things to make, things to do, ways to play.

It is surprising what a bit of paper and glue will do. Or old boxes, materials, ribbons. Then, of course, the stone and boards that boys can accumulate hold a wealth of possibilities.

New games need nothing but a few children and a place to run. Even the latter can be dispensed with in case of guessing games.

Yes, vacation children need assistance with their play. A little work and a little play will sweeten up tempers like magic.

Making Makeup Stay On Is Big Summer Problem

By ALICIA HART

When the weather is very hot, the woman whose skin is oily is most interested in anti-shine preparations and new ways of making cosmetics stay on her skin.

Knowing this, one fine Fifth Ave. cosmetics company has worked out a special routine. It includes use of their particular anti-shine product (it happens to be a powder, but there are also anti-shine lotions and creams on the market) as well as soap and water and a system for "setting" face powder.

After a thorough cleansing with soap and powder and an ice water rinse, anti-shine powder is to be patted into the skin on face and throat. The powder is supposed to form a protective surface between skin and cosmetics—a surface which will absorb superfluous oil and prevent it from seeping through to spoil makeup.

POWDER ROUGE IS RECOMMENDED

Application of loose powder rouge is the next step. These experts maintain that powder rouge stays on the surface of the complexion. They prefer it to paste rouge which gets below the surface of the skin—down into enlarged pores which often are numerous in oily skin.

Over anti-shine powder and powder rouge a special powder foundation in liquid form is to be smoothed on. Water-thin and non-greasy, it dries quickly. Pat it on with fingertips or with a bit of cotton. It sets the anti-shine powder and holds the powder rouge on the skin for hours. When the lotion has dried, face powder and lipstick are applied in the regular manner.

To "set" face powder, simply wring a piece of cotton out of cold water or cold skin tonic, then press it lightly against the powdered areas.

THE OFFICIAL DEMOCRATIC EMBLEM IS NOT A DONKEY
6-17

The official emblem of the Democratic Party in the United States of America is not a donkey, but a rooster. This emblem was created by Joseph Chapman of Greenfield, Ind. When his Whig opponents taunted him for his "crowing," the Democratic Party adopted the rooster as the official emblem as it represented nature's chief crower. The donkey was introduced by the newspaper leader, Thomas Nast and has never been the official emblem at all. He also introduced the elephant as the Republican emblem, and the tiger for Tammany Hall.

Long-Stemmed American Beauties

— By John Robert Powers —

JOSELYN REYNOLDS

Joselyn Reynolds left home and decided to make her own way in this world because she didn't want to have to play bridge all her life. Born 25 years ago in New Rochelle, Westchester county, New York, she was scheduled for a debut and all the trimmings. Deciding against the social whirl, Joselyn, at the age of 19, left home for bigger and, she hoped, better things. A variety of exclusive schools claimed her the early part of her life. Among them were Rogers Hall in Lowell, Massachusetts, and Greenwich Academy in Connecticut, where she was assistant athletic coach for a year.

About this time her parents lost their money, but she was fortunate enough to secure a scholarship to Syracuse University and the ambition to continue her education encouraged her to work her way through the first and only year she spent at college. Her interest at that time was in commercial art and through her ability in this field she secured a job with a famous commercial artist in New York City. She worked for a year at this but her only assignments were drawing sheets, pillowcases and shoes and in her own words, she "nearly went crazy" with artists she had met in her work and did so well that through their recommendation she came to us. That was some five and a half years ago.

Her first posing job with us was an eventful one for it was there that she met her husband-to-be. His name is Dean Libby, one of the leading male models and a yachting enthusiast and salesman on the side. Before this, Joselyn says, she "had millions of boy friends and never looked at the same one twice," but the minute she saw Dean she knew that he was the one man she had been waiting for. We doubted this "millions of boy friends" statement and she assured us that she seemed much older when a child and had her first date at the age of 12 in the company of her older sister, with whom she double-dated until she met Dean.

Another subject that she was interested in was dramatic art, and she appeared in several amateur productions until she was convinced the stage was not for her.

Hers is a happy and easy-going life. Yachting is the hobby of both Joselyn and her husband, and they owned a 30-foot friendship type sloop. A friendship type sloop, in case you don't know, is strictly a pleasure boat and is not for racing. During the summer when business is slow they take cruises.

Her favorite place is the West Indies, and it is her ultimate ambition to live on an island there—she has one all picked out, a small island with a beautiful beach, steep cliffs and virgin forest.

Her temporary ambitions hover between two desires. One is to be a real career girl, and the other to be a model wife with lots of babies.

She has a real freckled face. Experience has taught her that if she wants to keep them off her face in the summertime that she should cover her face with make-up in the sun, and then when she gets home remove it and put her face under a sun lamp. In spite of the fact that sun lamps are supposed to have all the rays of the sun, she says sitting under one will not bring out freckles.

For a diet she recommends milk and orange juice and to eat a small amount of any kind of food whenever you get hungry. She eats four and five times a day but never a lot at a time. She keeps her slender, graceful figure this way and you only have to look at her chart to verify this.

What To Do

I am planning to give a dinner party at one of the hotels and wish you would tell me where I should receive my guests? Would it be better not to select the dinner, but let my guests order what they like? Thank you. MRS. S. G. W.

Answer—Usually there is a sort of lounge where afternoon tea is served and where a hostess may comfortably wait for her guests to join her. They will have checked their coats and enter the lounge as they would enter a living room ready to go in to dinner. In some hotel restaurants people wait in the hall or lobby. It is always better to order dinner because to consult the taste of each guest in a large party would take too long. You might let your guests choose their different desserts if you like, though I think it is easier to order for them when you order dinner. After-dinner coffee may be served at table or in the lounge.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband is an average man. He is kind, generous, considerate, easy to live with, with no more faults than the next man and also just as many. We have been married fifteen years and are building a beautiful home. Now I have absolute evidence that he has been unfaithful to me occasionally. When I first heard of it, it nearly killed me and I worried myself into a very nervous state. However, after thinking the matter over from all angles, I have decided to take his philandering with a shrug and a grin-and-bear-it attitude. STUPID

Answer:

I get thousands of letters every year from married women discussing this problem of the philandering husband and what a wife should do about it. Naturally they take different attitudes on the subject, according to their natures.

Some are so crushed by discovering that the husbands that they thought little tin gods have betrayed them that they can only lie down in the dust and bemoan themselves. Others feel that a woman owes it to her self-respect to rush to the divorce court and separate herself from a husband if he has not been true to her, no matter what abject poverty and want it may bring upon her and her children.

Each wife must decide the question according to her own lights, of course. The heartbroken woman would drown in her own tears if she stayed with the husband she has loved and lost. The fiery, high-tempered one would probably commit murder. The woman who could never forgive or forget, but who sacrificed herself for her children, would go through a life of martyrdom. And it would only be the woman who could realize that a husband need not be a total loss, even if he has one fault, who could gather up the pieces of her shattered idol and stick them together again and have a pretty good parlor ornament after all.

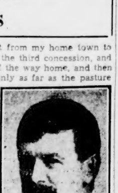
Stories Here and There From His Books, Lectures and Conversations

MUSHROOMS

I AM very fond of mushrooms. Often I go out from my home town to where there are some big open pastures on the third concession, and gather up a whole basketful—carry them part of the way home, and then—throw them away. Sometimes I carry them only as far as the pasture fence and throw them away there, or at other times I take them part of the way home and throw them away beside the road or in a culvert. Sometimes I go alone, or sometimes with another man—someone also keen on mushrooms—and then we perhaps carry them further and don't throw them away until we are nearly back to town.



STEPHEN LEACOCK

Your trouble is, you see, are the darned things mushrooms? You feel all right about it when you pick them, and then later, perhaps quite suddenly, the doubt—are they really mushrooms, or are they that deadly thing—what's it called—the culex americanus? or the codex siniaticus?—anyhow the kind that poisons you in less than five minutes.

Yet it seems such a shame to throw away beautiful mushrooms, without at least trying them out, that at times I carry my mushrooms right into town, and give them away to any friends I meet.

And that reminds me of the day I gave the mushrooms to Arthur Hart, or rather, to use the name that he gave himself—Art 'Art. Art was a little Cockney Englishman. He was a friendly little fellow as all Cockneys are, and likely to be called by his christian name, Art, rather than by his surname 'Art.

As soon as he felt that he had made an acquaintance he would say, "I say, don't call me 'Art, just call me Art—that's good enough, ain't it?"

Then he would explain himself in more detail. "I down't like formality. When people start, 'Art this and 'Art that, I always sy, 'Look 'ere, ole chap, never mind that 'Art business, just call me Art!"

Well, I was coming back one day from getting mushrooms and had just thrown my basketful into a culvert outside the town when I met my friend Webber on the street, and he gave me another basketful. I couldn't throw them away while Webber was in sight, and I was still carrying them when I met Art.

"My 'at," he said, "those are fine mushrooms!"

I realized that there are a lot of Englishmen who know all about mushrooms. So I said, "Take them, Art, I have some at home already."

"I certainly will," Art said readily, and away he went with the mushrooms.

And the next day, first thing I knew somebody said to be on the street: "Did you hear about Arthur Hart? They don't think he'll live."

"Great Caesar!" I said. "What's the matter?"—though I felt I knew.

"Poisoned, so the doctors say; something he must have eaten, only Arthur says he didn't eat anything in particular at all."

It occurred to me that if Art was going to say nothing about the mushrooms, I wouldn't mention them either—not even later on. Life has to carry these buried recollections.

However, Art got better. I saw him on the street a few days later, and I said, "Art, I'm terribly sorry about giving you those mushrooms that poisoned you, and it was fine of you to say nothing about it."

"Ho, no!" Art said, "I didn't eat the mushrooms. I threw them away as soon as you were out of sight. I always do."

"But what poisoned you, Art?" I asked.

Art looked all round and put his hand to the side of his mouth and said in a low voice:

"Ootch!"

Funny, isn't it—we all throw away mushrooms, because a chance of one in a hundred, and take a chance (or used to in the days of which I speak) on "hootch" with the odds a hundred to one against us. There seems a sort of moral to this; but it might work the wrong way. I won't try to draw it: I'll leave the cork in it.

According To Culbertson

If average players think that they have heated arguments over bids or plays—they ought to hear the experts! Take a deal such as the one below, for example. It occurred in a recent master pair tournament and the atmosphere between North and South was decidedly strained from that point on.

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

NORTH
♥ Q 6
♦ K Q J 10 7 4
♣ A 10 6

WEST
♠ A Q 10
♦ 8 6 5
♣ K Q J 9 5

EAST
♠ J 8 6 4 3
♣ 7 4 3 2

SOUTH
♠ K 7 5
♥ A K J 10 9 4 3
♦ A 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 club	1 diamond	Pass	2 hearts
Pass	2 no trump	Pass	4 hearts
Pass	Pass	Pass

Since a heart slam was absolutely cold, it is needless to say that neither partner was satisfied with the above bidding. South felt, and stated in no uncertain terms, that he had been let down abysmally by North's failure to bid over four hearts. North was even more vociferous in excoriating South's last bid, claiming that, though South had represented an excellent hand, that he still had understated the fact.

I must say that I agree and sympathize with North's position. South's four heart bid, although den on North's imagination. What is more to the point, it placed an unnecessary burden. Let us consider the implication of all the bids:

North, vunerable, had overcalled a nonvunerable opening bid and immediately should have been credited with fairly substantial strength for the overcall. This is particularly true and applicable in a match-point game, in which nonvulnerable opponents are on the alert to "crack" a vulnerable overcaller, even at the one level.

South's two heart jump take-out undoubtedly was correct, since it insured the bidding being kept open for at least one round. This was all South required—he could "take charge" on the next round. When, however, North responded to this temporary force with two no trump, South certainly should not have risked a bid that might close the auction. In other words, his four heart bid, although another jump, was much too difficult to read, and there was a distinct chance that North, not realizing that South had first round control of hearts and diamonds, and second round control of the other two suits, would be satisfied with a game.

Thus, since by this time South could be assured that the bidding would not die short of game (surely North would not drop three hearts after he had shown at least a partial fit with his two no trump), he should have adopted some "stalling" measure that would give the opportunity to exchange further information. As a matter of fact, any one of three different bids would have been a great deal more suitable at this point than the four heart call actually made: (A) South could have bid three hearts to find out whether North would raise to four or rebid the no trump. If a raise came South could assume that his heart suit was solid and then could go investigating for aces with a conventional four no trump bid; (B) South could have bid three diamonds. Perhaps North could bid three hearts and then the bidding could proceed as described; (C) South could have bid three clubs as a cue bid, announcing first round club control and implying a very big hand. Obviously, the "first round club control" part would be a misstatement, but, in view of South's general strength, a very white lie. As a matter of fact, if South had bid either three hearts or three diamonds, North properly would have given a heart raise and South then would have been absolutely safe in employing the 4-5 no trump convention.

Perhaps North should have risked another bid over South's actual four hearts, but this, at best, is only perhaps.

The Things That Remain

By Nellie McClung

(Copyright Reserved)

IN READING the newspapers of the last few weeks, since the Royal Tour began, and listening to the announcers, there is one peculiar similarity. Even these fluent people, accustomed to speaking and writing, seemed lost for words. They frankly said, "I do not feel like talking now. I feel like the people here, who forget to cheer. I want to be silent too. It gets you—all this. It has a significance that cannot be expressed in words."

Now that invisible, intangible element in the visit of Their Majesties is the thing which will remain, when the crowds are dispersed, the flags taken down, and the grandstands returned to the lumber yard.

RIELS CHEER

I got it over the radio before I saw them. I got it when I read that they had driven in the rain in Winnipeg, rather than disappoint the people. I got it still clearer when I read that Louis Riel's relatives in St. Boniface, the whole family of Riels came, out to greet and cheer Their Majesties. There is a power in simple goodness which disarms resentment and wins even hearts that are sore.

The Riel family had reasons for bitterness. They know the trouble in 1885 should never have happened. A few wise men at Ottawa could have allayed the fears of the Metis in the Northwest. They would have answered the letters kindly and courteously. They would have sent someone out to assure the settlers that they were not in any danger of losing their land, but unfortunately uncivil servants at Ottawa clothed with a little brief authority, treated the petitions of the Metis with cold disdain. Appeals were ignored, letters unanswered. No one can think of these things today without sorrow.

BITTER THINGS

But that day in St. Boniface, when the King and Queen drove slowly through the tree-lined streets, the remembrance of these bitter things passed away in the presence of these two friendly messengers of good-will. In that moment the Riel family may have felt the brushing of an angel's wing on their faces. I know I felt it when I read about them, and I am glad a sympathetic reporter had gone to their home and talked with them. Many old sores have been healed in these heart-warming days.

It is strange how timely the Royal visit has been. I cannot believe it has come by chance, that we have had the inspiration of the presence of our Sovereigns at a time when the affairs in Europe are at their lowest ebb. Violence and force have done their worst, and the mistaken doctrine of appeasement has had to be abandoned. Some of us have held to it too long. We know that now. And the knowledge hurts. It did seem right.

Then came the great event which gave us release for the time at least, from our fears and anxieties concerning the smouldering volcano which is Europe. From the moment that the King and Queen walked up the gangplank at Quebec, a new spirit of unity seemed to come to the Dominion. French and English, labor and capital, east and west, rich and poor, young and old, have been drawn closer together. Prejudices have suddenly dried up and blown away.

NEW PLACE

We always knew that the Royal visit would give Canada a new place of importance among the nations of the world. We knew it would stimulate trade, even among us, the common people who stand on the street, or sit on the improvised grandstands. Even we have taken money out of the teapot in honor of our sovereigns for new dresses and hats and white gloves. Did not I, on the Saturday before the Royal visit, deplete the household fund to buy a lunch basket with handles, a real one, because I felt that on that day of all days, May the 30th, we could not eat sandwiches out of a shoe-box.

HAVE BEEN MELLOWED

We knew the Royal visit was a great stroke of business, but that is the least of its benefits. The psychological effect on this country cannot be estimated. We have been mellowed, cheered, harmonized. Family reunions have taken place. All the leaves have been put in the dining-room tables. Beds have been made in hay-lofts and on verandahs. Visiting babies have been put to sleep in bureau drawers. In Regina the theatres gave accommodation to any who wished to sleep in their comfortable seats. All the resources of the country have been called out to accommodate the visitors, and it has all been done with a great spirit of comradeship and merriment. People, even small children, have walked to railway sidings in the hope of getting a glimpse of a face at a window, and it has been there, a smiling, friendly face.

SONGS OF EMPIRE

School children all over the Dominion have been singing the rousing songs of Empire. Great songs, free from any taint of racial strife. Many of our American friends have come to rejoice with us, and in their honor the Stars and Stripes ride the breeze beside the Union Jack. The King, in his Empire broadcast, told us that love, honesty and service are the keynotes of Empire, and so, in this spirit, with humble hearts full of gratitude, the people of Canada have sent their voice around the world in a call for peace and understanding.

"May love alone for wrong atone
Lord of the Lands, make all the world thine own!"

PHYSICAL WORK INSTRUCTORS TO ADDRESS PARLEY

A. S. Bird, supervisor of physical education for the Edmonton Public School Board, left Saturday morning for Vancouver where he will attend the national convention of the Canadian Physical Education Association, Monday to Thursday.

Miss Marjorie M. Davidson, director of girls' physical education for the public schools, will leave Sunday for the convention. Both will deliver addresses at the convention, which is being held largely for school and college physical instructors.

Mr. Bird, who has been physical director in Edmonton since last September, will speak on program construction for boys' physical education, outlining allotments of time best for various phases of physical training.

Miss Davidson will speak on games and competitions as a part of physical training programs for girls.

Following the convention Mr. Bird will attend the University of Washington at Seattle, where he will complete work for his bachelor of arts degree and start on a master of science degree, majoring in physical education.

Whooping Cough

Whooping cough cases this week dropped to half the number reported last week, according to Dr. G. M. Little, city medical officer of health. There were 32 cases this week and 65 last week. Eight cases of chickenpox were reported, compared with three the previous week.

Five babies are born every minute in the United States.

Rain Fails Deter Oldtimers When Lake Outing Held

Threatening clouds were not enough to keep the Old Timers away from their sixth annual picnic at Lakeview Friday afternoon. About 180 people were in attendance before the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old Timers' Association gathering went into action.

Shortly after 2:30 p.m. the program got under way, when T. H. Wells, chairman of the races and prizes committee took up his megaphone, and the crowds gathered to witness the first out-of doors event.

"After going across the prairies in covered wagons and democrats, and taking about three months, in all sorts of weather, to do it, a bit of rain can't keep us away from our annual get-together," said one of the enthusiasts, Mrs. R. Turnbull, whose parents came to Edmonton by ox-cart in 1878.

HERE SINCE 1879

Among the old timers in attendance, Mrs. John A. McDougall, watched the events from her car. Mr. and Mrs. McDougall arrived in Edmonton in 1879, after travelling from Eastern Canada, via Duluth and Fisher's Landing, now known as Fargo, from which point they travelled by steamboat on the rivers to Winnipeg. From Winnipeg to Edmonton they travelled by covered wagon. The trip from Winnipeg to Edmonton alone took three months.

Another old timer in attendance was Mrs. George Long of Namao, who came to Alberta about fifty years ago. Leaving their home in Meaford, Ontario, she and her husband spent a year farming some 60 miles from Winnipeg, which they left on June 20, 1881, by ox-team, and after spending one week in Battleford and one week in Brandon, where they had to live in tents, they reached their destination on September 1 of that year.

One absentee from the gathering was Mr. James H. Tofield, after whom the town was named. Mr. John McLellan, 85 years of age, stood on the sidelines and watched the fun. Mr. McLellan reached Winnipeg in 1881, and then moved to Edmonton South, where he has been residing for the past forty years.

Due to the bad weather and the crowd being smaller than was anticipated only eight of the nineteen items on the program took place. Miss Pearl Shulba won the ladies' ball sweeping contest, for those under 20, followed closely by Miss Betty King and Miss Betty Wells Mrs. Nasichuk led the second event, for those between 20 and 40, with Mrs. B. L. Abrams and Miss L. McLellan coming in second and third. The ladies over 40 were led by Mrs R. Hulbert, Mrs Sharp and Mrs. T Lendrun

PORTUS PIE CHAMP

The pie-eating contest created much amusement as Walter Portus ate his way through a blueberry pie first. This was an open event. The girls tried hard, but too much laughter held them from making much progress. Miss Fraser's team won the ring passing event. In the boys' sack race, the winners were Cliff Crozier, K. Jardine and John Walter, and the girls' sack race was led by Doris McDonald, Laura Jardine and Verna Weaver. The last item on the out-of-doors part of the program, the mixed three-legged race, was won by Miss Verna Weaver and E. McDougall, with Miss L. Davenport and J. Walter running a close second.

Supper indoors followed, as basket suppers were produced, while the committee in charge provided tea and coffee. In the evening the Welsh Male Voice Choir, under the baton of Jack Williams, provided a program, which was followed by some "old time" dancing from 9 p.m. until midnight.

THOSE PRESENT

Among those present were Mrs A. H. J. McCaulay, Mrs. John Cookson, Mrs. A. O. Innes, Mrs. E. W. Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Henderson, Mrs. G. J. Dorlands, Mrs. D. G. McQueen, Mr. and Mrs. J. McCool, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ross, Mr. Thomson, Miss Etta McLeod, Miss Jean McQueen, Mrs. C. Learmont, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Abram, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lendrum, Mrs. Harriet Sutherland, Mrs. C. Rea, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Eleanor Crozier, Miss Eleanor Crozier, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Crozier, Miss Eleanor Crozier, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Long, Mrs. George Long, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Uren, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pioneers Make Merry at Picnic

- By Bulletin Staff Photographer

The Inquiring Reporter

City council at present is studying a report on softening of water, and considering the feasibility of softening the city water supply. The suggestion was first made by Ald. A. Blair Paterson.

A number of Edmonton housewives were questioned by The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter as to whether they thought softening would be of any benefit to them.

Below are their opinions:

MRS. C. N. BAKER: I would be in favor of softening the water, as long as no chemical would be put in which would spoil it as a drinking water. Soft water would be easier to use for washing and easier on the hands.

• • •

MRS. T. W. ROBSON: I am certainly in favor of it. The city water now is much too hard and I have to use too much soap. It is hard to wash your hair in this water. In some cities, you can just wash your hair in the water from the taps, but here you have to use rain water or add a softener. I am in favor of it all around.

• • •

MRS. WILLIAM DEAN: I think it would be fine. It would be more economical in a number of ways, especially in soap. It also makes the clothes wash whiter. At the present time I use rain water for a lot of washing but it occasionally runs out. I have to use water softener and it is hard on the hands.

• • •

MRS. J. T. LETT: I hadn't thought much about it. I don't think it would make a great deal of difference. My soap costs have never seemed excessive. Generally speaking, I think the water here is pretty good.

• • •

MRS. W. C. T. MATTHEWS: The soap saving certainly would be a benefit. I wash my hair with rain water and, of course, it would be easier to have soft water from the tap. I had not thought about it until now, though.

A meeting of the property committee of the Edmonton school board will be held in the boardroom, 510 Civic Block, Tuesday, June 20, at 8 p.m.

WORLD'S ILLS CAN BE CURED BY OPTIMISM

International President Addresses Club In City Friday

Cure of the world's ills may be found in a courageous optimism that continues to strive for the best even when the dark clouds overcast the horizon, said Dr. I. Fern Petty, Los Angeles, president of Optimist International, when addressing members of the local club and their wives at the Country Club Friday night

Speaking on the topic "Can We Be Optimists Now?" Dr. Petty said that "most of the world's problems will be solved when we approach them with a spirit of [illegible] and confidence and [illegible] friendly co-operation instead of force in [illegible] the differences between races, [illegible]

FACE REALITIES

Declaring that Optimists [illegible] honest in facing realities, Dr. Petty admitted the gravity of problems caused by "unbalanced dictators with egotistical minds and dwarfed perspective" and by "racial hatreds resulting in persecution and cruelty unequalled since the Middle Ages."

"Even in our own North American countries," he confessed, "we have our problems. We see the old struggle between capital and labor. We see a faulty distribution of life's necessities and opportunities. We see many economic and political problems which require solution.

"We do not have many maladjustments in our countries, [illegible] anyone tell you democracy is [illegible] of old age. They are not the ills of senility, they are the diseases of adolescence.

"We are suffering from a case of economic mumps and political measles, that's all."

PRACTICAL OPTIMISM

"The world needs real, practical optimism," he declared, "but not the kind of optimism which goes into an eclipse the minute the struggle becomes difficult.

[illegible] problems there are answers, and [illegible] a courageous attack which is [illegible]

"It has required perspective and stamina in every era to meet the [illegible]

THE ARGENTINE

One of the reasons why Argentine women are so beautiful is that the men down there pampa them so much.

The Argentine is a land of romance and hard riding. The romance first, then ride like the devil to get away from her husband.

Every gaucho is an expert with the whip. In the Argentine, there is no percentage in being a naughty child.

The Argentine cowboy and his horse are never separated. This makes things pretty crowded in the shower-bath every morning.

Slips in Etiquette Can Be Costly for You

Asked to Dine Only Once!

How delightful the Smiths were—asked to dine at Mr. Employer's! But their social hopes are scuttled by Mrs. Smith's manners.

Here she is, holding tightly to her knife and fork as she passes her plate. In another moment she will be piling salt for her celery on the tablecloth, chopping all her meat into bits before she eats it.

You'll never get by with discriminating people that way, Mrs. Smith. Next time lay your knife and fork neatly across your plate before you pass it. Pour salt for celery on the edge of a plate, preferably your butter plate. Cut meat as you eat it—a small piece at a time.

Such niceties of etiquette aren't difficult—are really based on common sense. Do you hack vainly with a fork at endive, romaine, hearts of lettuce? You may use a knife too in cutting them. But for tender leaves, as pics, fruit or vegetable salads use only a fork..

Make your table manners an asset! Our 32-page booklet gives course-by-course rules for formal dinners. Tells what silver to use, when fingers are permissible. Explains good form for restaurants, clubs, teas, buffet parties.

Marry Me In May!

A Bulletin Short Story Complete on This Page Every Saturday

By Lionel C. Moise

"BUT I'm not going to be married in June!" demurred Winnifred Driscoll emphatically. "I've been planning all along on May."

"May?" Hubbard Ellsworth Bates bent a perplexed gaze on the charming face so close to his own. "But that's impossible. Why you didn't even know I wanted to marry you until five minutes ago!"

"Didn't I?" Winnie shot him a mocking glance from eyes still starry with rapture. "Listen, little boy. You may be a bachelor of science and have the phone number of all the atoms, but you've still got something to learn about important things. You've wanted to marry me for months, and I've wanted to marry you, too. And now that's agreed, let's not waste any more time. We'll go ahead and be married in May."

Hub Bates shook his head deliberately, half smiling. He was a large, lean, low-speaking young man, with steady gray eyes and a rocklike jaw.

"June will be perfectly all right for me," he said. "No good rushing things. Besides, I'm likely to be buried up to my ears in work for awhile. Something I bumped into at the lab—it looks plenty important, too. And, after all, Winnie, it's next door to May now. What possible difference can a month make?"

"Exactly what I was thinking, darling," agreed Winnie, brightly. "It doesn't make a speck. So we'll be married in May."

Their eyes met, his thoughtful and seeking, hers grave with purpose. Remarkable eyes they were, too . . . deep and steadfast and intensely blue, with an elfin crinkle at the corners to keep them from being unduly serious. And set in a very lovely face, young and frank and generally delightful.

A thoroughly eye-filling girl, Winnie Driscoll, from her slender ankles to the smooth top of her sensible little head. And with a beauty that wasn't all on the surface at that. A straight, clear-eyed, honest kind of beauty that could be warranted proof against time and ordinary wear. Certainly, you'd think, about all any reasonable man would order in the way of a bride, let alone making stipulations about the date of delivery.

Yet Hubbard Bates pressed his point.

"What's the matter with June?" he demanded, studying her, still with that half-smile. "I thought it was the big bride month. Of course, I know a mere bridegroom isn't supposed to have much to say about his wedding day. Still—Come on! Let's make it June, Winnie, and end the argument."

Winnie Found Finality In Bates' Manner Annoying

There was a calm finality in his manner that, under the circumstances, Winnie found particularly annoying. She was used to Hub's deliberation and, as a rule, didn't mind. Bred-in-the-bone New Englanders were like that, she supposed. New York would snap him out of it in time. But right now it threatened to spoil all her plans.

"Hub, dear," she said, softly, "I suspect you're just being unbending. Doesn't it occur to you—I may have a special reason for wanting to be a May bride?"

"No," he answered, "it hadn't. What is it?"

For a moment, she was tempted to tell him the whole story. Then, with quick certainty, she realized how impossible that was. At least, as long as he had that silly, old-fashioned attitude.

"Oh, dear," she regretted, "I am crazy about you, Hub, but you're very trying at times. What a man! Haggling with a perfectly nice girl over when you'll condescend to marry her! When you ought to be all Lochinvarish and anxious." Her eyes suddenly narrowed. "My! I just had a horrible thought. Maybe you don't want to marry me at all!"

"Nonsense." His voice had an exasperated edge. "You know better than that. Only—well, frankly, Winnie, I don't see why you're in such a rush!"

"Oh!" Her eyes lit with a small resentful blue spark. "Hub, that wasn't a nice remark. It was humiliation enough — having to practically propose to you. And now you sound like you thought I was trying to drag you to the license bureau. Was that necessary?"

"You didn't propose to me," he said.

"Well, I came close to it. Hub, do you really love me, I want to know."

He regarded her steadily.

"Yes," he said, with profound deliberation. "I most certainly do!"

She sighed.

"Well—will you marry me in May?"

His brows met in a stubborn line.

"Darling, I'll marry you in June—just as I said."

"No, Hub. May. Please!"

"Why?"

"Never mind why. Will you?"

"No."

"Very good." Winnie's chin went up defiantly. "Then I won't marry you at all!"

"Huh?"

"You heard me."

"But Winnie, there's no sense in that! Listen—don't you understand"—The anger got the better of him. "All right," he said, in a flat voice. "If that's how you feel about it."

"Good night," said Winnie.

"But, Winnie! Sweetheart—"

"Good night!"

Flings Self On Couch In Outburst Of Sobs

As the apartment door closed behind him, she flung herself on a studio couch, face down, and burst into furious tears.

"Hub!" she sobbed. "Hub What will I do?" Then, "Darn old Matteson—I could strangle him!"

But, because she wasn't the crying kind, she soon sat up, dried her eyes, and put her mind to work. After all, she might have known Hub would act that way. It was his New England training. He simply didn't like being hurried into anything.

Yet there was no reason he should be so pig-headed about it. Her outraged pride warmed the flame of her rage anew. The idea! Making her look as if she couldn't wait to marry him When all she was really thinking about was his good.

Serve him right if she phoned him right now and said, "All right, Master Mind, we'll make it June!" Then she'd lose her job, and he'd find out what it was like to support a wife on nothing a week.

But she discarded that impulse as it was born. It wouldn't do. There was no use getting married unless they could make it click. And losing her job would be fatal—regardless of Hub's crazy notions on the topic of wage-earning wives. Goodness, the man was as archaic as old Matteson.

Of course, once Hub really got going in his profession she could tell the Matteson Corporation good-by and concentrate on being the wife of a successful scientist. That would be—well, say in five or six years. Not more and probably less. Because Hub Bates was like other sure, slow-moving bodies. Once he got going he'd roll fast.

"Hub," she said, "you know I want it in May, don't you? You haven't forgotten that?"

Meantime, though, Winnie knew to a penny the amount of his monthly check, and with social security deductions, it added up to the impractical sum of ninety-eight dollars and twenty-two cents. Just a little more than half of what she got from the Matteson Corporation for composing tactful little form letters that sent housewives running to their grocers for Matteson food products.

But—the Matteson Corporation was in the business of selling things, while the Ridpath Research Foundation, for which Hub labored with consuming passion, was merely in the business of developing devices and formulae for the benefit of mankind.

Once in a while, when its laboratory technicians hit on something of commercial value, they were permitted to collect patent royalties, but such digressions from the main purpose were rather frowned on. Hence Winnie's certainty that it would be some time before Hub could really afford a wife.

Winnie Doesn't Deceive Nina

The door signal buzzed But it wasn't Hub. Only Nina Parsons, with whom Winnie shared her cosy little apartment in the upper "Forties."

"What!" said Nina. "No boy friend kicking around underfoot?"

"He left early," Winnie evaded. "He—he had to go back to the laboratory."

"Uh-huh." Nina tossed her hat on a table, lit a cigaret. "I know that one too, dearie. What was the war about?"

"Oh, well, if you will be intuitive!" And Winnie told her.

Nina nodded sagely. She was twenty-eight—six years older than Winnie—and had given up serious love affairs after burning her fingers in youth. Though she never talked about it, she was significantly bitter against philandering married men.

"I see," she summarized. "You could lead your horse to water, but you couldn't make him jump in. Well, don't despair. He'll be back."

"Do you really think so, Nina?"

"Of course. He's wild about you, darling. Just give him a chance to think it over."

"But it won't do any good," gloomed Winnie, "unless he changes his mind. And he seemed terribly definite. Oh, Nina, if I lose him, I'll never forgive old Matteson as long as I live. I don't care what he says—there's no excuse for putting out an order like that!"

"Of course there isn't," agreed Nina puffing out a long whiff of blue smoke. "But—what can you do about it? He's your boss."

Long after she slipped into bed that night, though, Winnifred lay awake, thinking about her employer and the recent order to employees that was responsible for her entire predicament.

The girls at the Matteson Corporation — and there were hundreds of them—called it the "Gym" order among themselves. "Gym" standing for "get your man."

Posted during the last week of April, it had informed all and sundry that, to avert an indiscriminate reduction in personnel (management for wholesale firing) the company would pursue a policy, beginning June 1, of dismissing all girl employees who got married.

The purpose, the bulletin said, wasn't to discourage marriage, but to distribute jobs more equitably. Defensively, it cited identical action by other large concerns, also by the heads of public departments in some states and cities.

Some of the girls, especially the unwedded ones, had thought it downright mean. Others, whose jobs were safe, had hailed it as a triumph of economic justice.

For or against, however, one thing had been immediately clear to all. Plainly, any girl who expected to marry, and to hold her job, too, would have to manoeuver the bridegroom-elect to the altar before the first of June.

Hub Opposed To Working Wives

It had been disquieting news to many, and particularly disquieting news to Winnie Driscoll.

Because, unlike most of the girls, she couldn't just mention the order casually to her boy friend and let nature take its course.

Not for a moment. Hub Bates wasn't that kind of a boy friend.

The whole trouble was that Hub, along with some other peculiar intellectual quirks that stowed away on the Mayflower, had picked up the notion that it was a stigma on a man to have a wife who was smart enough to earn her own living.

When he'd first voiced this illogical belief, Winnie had imagined he was merely orating, like most men who suffer agonies at the thought of the little woman going out to grapple with the world, only to sprain their wrists later grabbing for the wifely pay-check.

But it had turned out he really felt that way. Or thought he did, which was just as bad. The truth, of course, being that he was too proud to marry a wife he couldn't support. While he hadn't said it in so many words, she'd seen it gnawing at him. Freezing his speech when he plainly burned to tell her all the things she wanted to hear. Making them both miserable and uncertain.

And she'd wanted to do something about it. She'd wanted to say, "Look here, Hub, put that Mayflower pride of yours in your pocket and beg me to marry you." Lots of times. But she'd never dared to.

Then, out of a clear sky, had come the "get-your-man" order.

Lying there, eyes closed, thinking it over, a curving slender figure beneath thistle-down covers, she wondered if she could have handled the problem any better.

No, the order didn't leave any other way out. She either had to marry Hub in May or not at all. Because if she married him after the June 1 deadline, she'd lose her job. And, completing the vicious circle, if she lost her job she could not marry him. It occurred to her they should have called it the "Now-or-Never" order.

If only he weren't Hub—the only man in the world—her only man anyway! And if she weren't so confident he felt exactly the same way!

"But he's horribly stubborn!" she whispered to the darkness. "Stubborn and unreasonable!"

Why did he have to balk at having the wedding in May? What difference could a detail like that make to a man?

Everything had gone along so beautifully up to that point. His proposal had come swiftly, easily—far more easily than she'd expected. It gave her a warm, comforting feeling to remember that. There's only been one bad moment, in fact—when he mentioned having feared she'd object to giving up her job. And she'd deftly sheered from that without committing herself.

She'd been swimming in ecstasy, joyous, exultant Thinking how grand it would be to share things with him, to look after him, to make it easier for him to pursue his absorbed exploration into atomic structure. She'd almost been grateful to old Matteson for forcing the issue. Then—Hub's sudden look of inflexible purpose and his deep quiet voice—she could hear it—pronouncing so calmly the words that threatened wreckage to all her plans. "Darling, I'll marry you in June, just as I said,"

June, lovely June. The month of brides! Yeah? Not if you were in love and worked for the Matteson Corporation. You'd get married in May and like it But what if your boy friend wouldn't co-operate, and if you didn't dare to tell him? Why, in that case you didn't get married at all. Nice, wasn't it? And E. L. Matteson was a grand guy to work for. Swell. Like Simon Legree!

She was drifting off to restless slumber when she suddenly recalled that offer from the Babcock Company. Babcock was a small but lively competitor of the Matteson Corporation. Once, the Babcock sales manager had intimated to her that she might see him if she ever felt like changing jobs.

Hmm. Still, would it be worth while? Changing jobs because Hub Bates wanted to be pig-headed and arbitrary! No. She should say not. Better to sniffle a little and go to sleep. So that was what she did. If she first stopped to recall the sales manager's name, blame it on the vagaries of the half-waking mind.

Nina Right About Hub's Returning

Nina was right about Hub coming back. He called on the phone the next night, and his voice was harassed. Winnie thought he'd repented until, after some preliminary verbal sparring, she asked, bluntly:

"Well, will you marry me in May?"

And with scarcely a moment's hesitation, back came his answer:

"Why be willful? I'll marry you in June, of course."

Disappointed and furious, she hung up on him.

So he was going to make willpower the issue! Well, she'd show him. Then she knew she wouldn't. She didn't care if he had his way about everything — nearly everything—that is. She only had to have her way about this.

She thought again of telling him the whole story. But realized in the same moment that it was less advisable than ever now. More than likely, it would merely destroy the last chance of converting him to her view.

She was most unhappy all week, especially as it became evident Hub wasn't going to call again. Then, toward the middle of the following week, he gave her a glad surprise by appearing unannounced.

"I don't like being hung up on," he said, "and I had to talk to you."

He looked gaunt and haggard, and she fought remorse as she mixed him a cocktail and searched through the pantry. She was sure he never ate enough, nor ate the right things. He was the type that wouldn't even if he could afford them, which he couldn't. That was just one added reason why she had to marry him—so she could look after the big incompetent.

He polished off a dish of scrambled eggs with such alacrity that she fed him more, adding sausages and abundant toast.

"I must have been hungry," he said, abstractedly, munching the last of the toast. "Been working all hours. I've really got something this time, Winnie. Sheer luck, too. Hydrogen. You see, I was fooling around with some heavy water and—"

Then Nina arrived, and he didn't get to tell her the rest of it.

Just before he left, he asked her:

"Do you think you'd like the new show at the Imperial? The Lunts, you know."

Winnie knew then he'd probably been starving himself to buy the tickets, and she could have kissed and shaken him at the same time. But she did neither. There was that absurd pride of his to think about.

"Why, yes," she said "I'd like nothing better. You were terribly sweet to remember."

Got Through Evening By Tacit Agreement

By tacit agreement, they'd got through the evening without bringing up the issue between them. But it reared its meddlesome head again as he was leaving the next evening, after they'd returned from the play.

"I may not see you for a few days," he said. "The company's got a special job for me. I'll be out of town a few days—Boston mostly. I'll call you when I get back."

She reckoned swiftly. Why, that would almost bring them to the last week in May! And nothing settled yet.

She held him at the door, her hand lightly on his arm.

"Hub, dear," she said, "I'm sorry I hung up on you. I'm sorry for everything. Can't we—straighten things out?"

"Of course we can, Winnie. I've been hoping you'd say that. It's miserable—having a trivial disagreement like that between us."

"Then"—happiness made it hard for her to speak—"you know it is trivial?"

"Trivial beyond words." His agreement was almost too enthusiastic. "And I'm delighted you recognize it, too, beloved. May or June—what's the difference? We'll laugh at the whole argument, once we're married."

"Well," she said, "go on."

"Go on?"

"Oh, Hub! Don't make me drag you down to the license bureau! Darling, you just can't be that obtuse! When? Tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" He drew back. "Why, I thought that was all settled. I mean—that we—wait till June. Or did I misunderstand?"

Her eyes were wide and incredulous.

"Hub," she said, picking her words carefully, "you know I want it in May, don't you? You haven't forgotten that?"

"But I thought you said that was trivial! And I agreed with you absolutely."

"Please don't, Hub," she said. [illegible]

For a moment, she could feel him yielding, or thought she could. [illegible]

"I don't think so," he said gravely, his eyes avoiding hers. "Somehow, Winnie, I've a notion you'll enjoy being married in June. More than in May. Yes, on the whole, I think June will be better."

* * *

Couldn't Mistake Hub Bates' Look

He was as calm as ever, as confident, as sure. Then she saw his eyes were lit by a deep gleam of amusement. He [illegible] ing it all as a joke—laughing at her!

And she'd been ready to quit her job for him, to risk her future by switching to a new and untried employer. But she didn't let the anger into her this time. It was too serious. Her tone was frigidly polite, even calmer than his, as she said:

"I [illegible] Hub, when I said I was sorry I hung up on you. I'm not sorry. I'm glad. And I should advise you not to call me when you get back from Boston, or I shall most certainly hang up on you again!"

She waited for him to move, so she could close the door. But he stood there, blocking it with his big, hungry body.

"You don't mean that, Winnie," he said, his voice deep and certain. "I know you don't."

"I do mean it! Word of honor, Hub Bates, I never want to see you again"—her voice wavered—"unless you change your mind. And—don't forget it—it has to be before the first of June!"

"Yes," he said, not moving, "I understand. Perfectly."

"Then"—she had control of her voice again—"Please let me close this door."

He moved then, and she was left alone, with only the door to look at.

She had a wild impulse to fling it open again and run after him. But she suppressed it resolutely.

Somehow, she didn't feel as heart-broken as she had that first time. Why, she was almost happy! Was she getting over loving him? No, it wasn't that, thank goodness. It was his look as she'd closed the door.

There was no mistaking that look. No matter what he said—no matter what he pretended—he loved her desperately. So much that he'd have to come back. Even though he appeared to be laughing at her. Even if he was laughing! Yes, unless her heart was a complete flop as an indicator, he wouldn't be able to stay away.

Winnie was singing, instead of crying, when Nina came in a little later.

But, as the days slipped swiftly by—again without a word from him—she began to doubt.

Had she misread that parting look? Was he really that mean, that stubborn, that hard? Why didn't he at least telephone?

Longest May That Winnie Had Known

It was the longest May she could remember. There were even five Sundays in it, and the last of them fell just before Memorial Day. A double holiday—and no Hub to single it out from all the other days of life—the days that, somehow, had never taken on real meaning until she met him. A double holiday, with nothing to do except wonder that the first of June was so near at hand, to ask herself whether she'd ruined everything.

She took counsel with Nina

"A girl does funny things when she's in love," said that abjurer of the deeper emotions. "But men are funny things, too. And May isn't over yet."

But it was nearly over. Twenty-nine days had gone, and the thirtieth was slipping by on swift, ghostly wings. As for the thirty-first, it didn't count. Winnie had looked all that up, and she knew it would take longer than a day to get a license and get married in New York. Or in any immediately adjacent state. And Hub, she was only too sure, would know it, too.

No, if he didn't call her soon, he wouldn't call at all.

"Well, I'll phone him myself," she said, despairingly, as she switched off a doleful Memorial Day program. "Maybe he doesn't know about the license laws, after all."

But, with a slender finger already on the dial, she changed her mind.

"I'd never know then whether he loved me," she thought. "I've done everything I can. He'll have to do the rest."

At eight, she decided it was no use. Yet she stayed close to the phone.

"He's mean!" she raged, as a complacent announcer broke the news that it was nine o'clock by some patented time unknown to Greenwich. "He knows I'm waiting and he's just torturing me. Or—he doesn't care!"

Nina phoned. She was at a studio party in the Fifties and wanted Winnie to join her.

"No," said Winnie, "I've a headache."

"Well," responded Nina's cheery voice, "drop in later if you recover."

Presently, the announcer revealed in infinitely confidential tones that it was ten.

"He's worse than mean," Winnie resolved. "He's a sadist. I hate him." And she wasn't referring to the announcer.

Notes New Tone In Hub's Voice

Finally, a little before eleven, she gave up. She'd go to the party. Let him call now! Just let him! He'd find out there was a limit to any girl's patience.

[illegible] extra dexterity at the mirror, wiping out all traces of concern, and [illegible]

Then with her hand on the knob, she went back to silence the radio.

"Bzz!"

[illegible] the lobby

"Hello, you! I'm coming up!"

She glanced dazedly at her wristwatch. Eleven thirty-three, and May still had twenty-four hours to go!

The elevator door clanged, she heard his long steps advancing down the hall. His knock.

"Darling!" His arms were around her, crushing her tight. What was he saying . . . "Meant to call you Saturday . . . Motor conked . . . Couldn't get to a phone . . . Just landed Newark . . . Meant to surprise you but not like this."

She lifted her face [illegible]

"What in China are you talking about?"

He explained, more soberly, but never letting go of her. She noted a new quality in his voice. His words came faster, almost tumbling over each other. There was a tenseness in his face she'd never seen before—a joyous tenseness—like that of a man who lays hands eagerly on something longed-for.

Gradually she comprehended. It was the glad sequel to the fairy-tale of science he'd vaguely sketched for her before—the result of his researches. Something he'd [illegible] carrying out his hydrogen experiments.

"I knew then I had it!" he said exultantly. "I was going to tell you that night, but Nina came in. So I decided to save it for a surprise."

What he had, it appeared, was a method of dissipating fog.

"But why," puzzled Winnie. "I like fog."

"Airplanes," he said. "They can't land in it."

Hub Didn't Mean To Cut Things So Close

The trip to Boston had been for a final test of his theory. He hadn't been quite sure even then [illegible] cial fog conditions had to be met and conquered before he could re- [illegible] from a phone when the motor of a seaplane cut out over a fog-bound Maine coast.

And now he was back, with a check for royalties in his pocket, begging her to forgive him. He showed her the check, and she almost fainted when she saw the figures.

"But I didn't mean to cut it so close, darling!" he apologized. "I actually did want to wait till June because I was practically sure it would take that long to complete the tests. By luck it didn't, and I've known for days that everything was going to be all right—that I could marry you and take care of you. The way I want to—without your having to work in anybody's office.

"And still I didn't want to tell you until it was all settled—because it would have been such a tough sock if anything had gone wrong. . . . But dearest one, if I hadn't been sure you loved me—if I hadn't been sure you'd wait—there wasn't a minute all the time that I wouldn't have dropped everything and dragged you boldly to the Municipal Building!"

She gazed into his eyes, rapt and dreaming.

[illegible] "That you'll—you'll marry me in May?"

The announcer—and his voice sounded like a benediction this time—opined that it was midnight.

"Will I?" she wondered if he squeezed atoms that hard to make them give up their secrets. "Listen. We've got a whole day yet. We'll get a special permit from a judge. Or we'll fly to some state where they don't make you wait three days after you get your license. Anyhow, you can count on being Mrs. Hub Bates before this time tomorrow. And"—he chuckled triumphantly—"the Matteson Corporation can find somebody else to write those cute little letters to customers."

[illegible] small voice. Then "Hub!" They'd have to find somebody else anyway. [illegible] Yes. I quit the Matteson Corporation Saturday. I was going to start with Babcock tomorrow."

"So—so I could marry you—in May!"

BRIDE ON A BUDGET

IRIS IVES, a radiant bride who [illegible] could take [illegible]

BART WHITTAKER, a righteous bridegroom, who looked at the bank-book first and his wife afterward.

* * *

Yesterday: Bart and Iris finally quarrel about eating at home. Iris accuses him of begrudging these meals. So Bart gives in and they decide to eat out [illegible] takers there [illegible] them.

CHAPTER VIII.

IT was not [illegible] to Bart to discover a[illegible] week of he[illegible] that made a sissy of the national debt.

It wasn't that they had eaten so much; rather, it was [illegible] to recall that they had eaten less than ever, even than at home. Nor was it the things they did afterward, really. They went to so many movies, dances and parties anyway. And the fact that it was so hot, even long after sundown, that the nights were panting, breathless ovens to move through in an ever increasing enervation made them reluctant to return to the little apartment.

He bought more gas and oil for his three-year-old coupe, and they covered miles along lake shores, into the country, just for the ride, and the heavenly respite from heat. They ate at cute resort places and danced. They went into air-conditioned movies, and to beach and swim parties. And all along the way, Bart's wallet fed a continual dribbling stream of small change that added up to alarming deficits at the end of each week.

In late July, the territorial manager of a radio and washing machine agency in Boston approached him to take on their line. Bart hadn't the money. But day by day, the conviction was growing on him that the only solution open to him, to his problem, was to make more money. It was one of those squirrel-in-a-cage problems that no matter how you travelled, or how fast, brought you right back to the beginning each time.

He had to make more money, because he was spending more than he could afford, so he hadn't enough money to try to make more money that he must have because, and so on. It was like that when the agent approached him

"You wouldn't need much, Mr Whittaker—a few hundred—say $1,800 would cover everything. This is a high class line, and you'd clean up on it. And we wouldn't care to let the territory go to any dealer. We want a dependable, responsible man who can push our line and build solid market for us."

Bart thought of his three insurance policies, all partly paid up. He thought of what they meant to him Security for Iris, protection. A lifeline to leeward, in case of trouble or storm.

Then he thought of the staggering total of deficits, he remembered how Iris had picked up since they began dining out again and going places. She [illegible] strong, she was too slender, and her job was hard. And she was so sure she couldn't give it up, ever. Perhaps because she knew his income was inadequate.

Obviously, he must make more money. Obviously he could not do it on a cash basis. And opportunity banged on the Whittaker door.

Afterward, Bart was to wonder at the ease with which he borrowed $600 on each of his three insurance policies. Considering the anxiety, the worry and difficulty of trying to make even the interest on the loans, it was astonishing. But [illegible] on a credit basis before. He disapproved of it, and abhorred all angles to the dismal system.

"We'll send your shipment right up, Mr. Whittaker; you can safely advertise for Saturday specials. Our trucks will be there early Fri[illegible]

This was Bart [illegible] lose. Nor could he escape going definitely. He'd make easily as much as his present deficit amounted to. It was a warm, a comforting thought.

The merchandise, when it arrived, was even better than Bart had hoped. It was easily worth the tag. [illegible] full page ad he ran in the Lakewood Clarion, Thursday, Friday and Saturday announcing the new Moderneze Washer, and Moderneze Radio at unheard of bargain prices. "Come in and see them."

They came in droves and hordes. They came, saw, and bought. And Bart's excitement rose to trembling heights, as he sent in contract after contract for approval at the home office. It was difficult to believe so many people hadn't washers, radios, flat-irons, food-mixers, toasters and ironers. It just proved how New England people appreciated quality merchandise.

The little stack of budget books dwindled, and the stock of merchandise had to be replenished often. By the end of July, Bart cut his Clarion ad down to half a page, and only two insertions a week. By that time, the advertising manager was his earnest friend, advising him on how to save money. Because to date, the Clarion had received no money for any of the advertisements.

"They're selling like gold-bricks, Whittaker, cut your expenses now and let the thing ride on its own steam. There's no sense going into debt over your head, so long as they keep coming for the stuff."

"If all my sales weren't on time-payment plan, I'd be so far ahead on this venture right now, I could take a month off and celebrate my good fortune," Bart explained.

"Takes time to expand, Whittaker; don't let it get you down. Everybody buys on budget plan now. The cash customers aren't buying any more. They're hanging right onto their money until this blows over. It's up to the credit group, now."

"I suppose so."

* * *

"Bart," Iris said that night, "if we're to have a vacation, or semi-honeymoon this year, it will have to be this month before the dean gets back. After that, there'll be no time off for any of us."

"I can't leave right now, Iris, this new agency is keeping us on the jump."

[illegible] wouldn't you make more sales?"

"We can't afford any more expense on the labor budget. [illegible] We took on one man, beginning this expansion, and it means less money for me."

"You're funny, Bart. You're selling washers and radios and electric appliances like a bargain basement prod, yet you talk as if you were heading straight for the poorhouse."

"If it was cash business, honey, we'd be riding the crest of the wave. It's all credit. So much down, so much a week."

[illegible] for a minute or so she studied the tips of her extravagant little [illegible]. Then she sighed.

"If they pay every week and others [illegible] you aren't all right, Bart."

[illegible] end of the reckoning, as [illegible] are sold. You see, dear, business is a pretty much a big headache."

"But you're making money, Bart. You are. And even if it was work, that's all the more reason why you ought to take a few weeks off and have a vacation."

"I couldn't afford one week!"

"All right, then. No vacation. And no honeymoon. It's a funny kind of marriage, Bart! You let the romance [illegible] outside, the day you married me."

"Iris, honey, don't you understand? This is our chance, this means we'll get somewhere. I can't [illegible] off on some nonsense."

"If you consider our honeymoon nonsense, Bart Whittaker."

"Look [illegible] we'll take two weeks off and [illegible] to New York, or wherever you want to, and I'll pay for everything. You have a good time, and I'll stay here and look out for everything."

"No! You think I can have any fun without an escort, Bart? Are your crazy? Whoever heard of a honeymoon without the bridegroom!"

"I'm just a tired businessman, honey. And business is so bad."

"You just said it was good!"

They left on a three weeks deferred honeymoon the following Sunday morning. Iris had a three-piece luggage set, brand new. It was packed with delectable vacation duds, all new, and the same fresh permanent and a modest diamond ring. The ring Bart had felt unable to give her when they were married in June. The ring he was definitely certain he could not afford, but [illegible] it in the window that Saturday night before they left on their trip.

"What's a wedding without a diamond, Bart?" she asked gaily, because [illegible] with Saturday night shoppers, "and a honeymoon without all the [illegible]

They left at 9 o'clock Sunday morning and the bride wore a corsage of sweetpeas pinned to her smart navy [illegible] suit, and her open mesh [illegible] enough to show the [illegible] der sty[illegible] The diamond on her [illegible] Bart would pay for, beginning September 1.

The Roundup

THERE is a terrific headache today in Winnipeg football circles and [illegible] the faces of the grid fraternity at Regina, Calgary and [illegible]. The reason is that Wilbur Moore, the sensational power [illegible] from Minnesota [illegible] play for the Winnipeg Bombers this fall [illegible]. Wilbur will play for the Washington Redskins of the National Professional League. That information came direct from Wilbur Moore to Ross Wile here yesterday in a personal [illegible] pals. Moore had until June 15 to give a definite decision to Winnipeg and has [illegible] done that by now.

Nobody will gloat over Winnipeg's tough luck, but just the same we feel a bit relieved up here. Moore looked like a double dose of dynamite . . . and all citizens here know that the Bombers were tough enough last year without the services of another galloping ghost to put on a twin act in the backfield with Fritz Hanson.

Butch Armstrong of the Free Press declares that Coach Threlfall has [illegible] Herbie Mobberly a regular backfield starter [illegible] this season. Herbie has been playing on the Winnipeg [illegible] bench [illegible], but his [illegible] his chance.

Stubborn Sam Takes Trimming

SAM DAVIDSON, dictator of the Dominion Football (soccer) Association, took a licking on the deal by which he cold-shouldered Edmonton [illegible] Scottish [illegible] team [illegible]. Edmonton offered $1,000 guarantee [illegible] even consider it. He sent the Scots [illegible]. The game drew $652 and Sam and the Scots took it all. Regina officials were left to produce $200 more to [illegible] game.

[illegible] that Edmonton soccer circles showed over [illegible] Regina, Dave Dryburgh of the Leader-Post says [illegible] dictator of Canadian soccer is [illegible] so long that folks have simply got tired of [illegible]. "Sam always manages to have an ace in the hole." [illegible]

All of which seems surprising since soccer officials, at least those around here, are not the type that will quit trying or meekly submit to a one-man dictatorship. I have a hunch that Sam had better have a couple aces and the joker in the hole if he wants to boss Canadian soccer much longer.

Syd Wooderson Faces Best U.S. Stars

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

PRINCETON, N.J., June 17.—Prospects are good for the fastest mile ever run on two legs when Sidney Wooderson, England's wonder sprite, meets four top United States milers, including Glenn Cunningham, in the feature attraction of today's sixth annual Princeton invitation track meet.

Wooderson, holder of the world's outdoor record of 4:06.4 for the classic distance has had four satisfactory workouts on the famous Palmer Stadium track. He's feeling great and has his heart set on establishing a record that might stand for his life-time. The figure in his mind and in that of his coach, Albert Hill, is 4:03.

To skim the mile at such a phenomenal pace the little London solicitor realizes he will have to step out in front of Cunningham and his other three rivals—Chuck Fenske, Blaine Rideout and Archie San Romani—at the start and run like a deer all the way.

He nodded agreement Thursday as his coach mapped out the plan by which he thought Sidney could run a 4:03 mile—60 seconds for the first quarter, 61 for the second, 62 for the third, 60 for the fourth.

CIVICS HOPING TO STOP SCONA GAME TONIGHT

Only two points separate Scona United and Civics in the Edmonton Soccer Association standings. Civics will be battling those unbeaten Scona lads this evening at Clarke Stadium and it is their one hope that they can bridge the gap between them and the leading Scona squad. The game will start at 7.00 p.m.

And the only way Civics can bridge that two-point gap is to beat the Sconaites. If they do, then it will be the first game that Scona has lost the decision, having beaten Scottish twice, Civics once and tied once with the Civics.

Thus tonight's game will be one of the most important in the soccer schedule to date.

The following Scona United players are asked to report at Clarke Stadium, Saturday at 6:30 o'clock: W. Kerr, T. Geldart, H. Pither, P. James, W. Lunde, L. Smitten, C. Francis, J. Smith, G. Ross, J. Graham, R. Topping, A. Scott, K. Mansfield, J. Hubbert.

TOP SQUADS JUNIOR LOOP MEET SUNDAY

Unions Face Peppery Arrows As Clubs Battle for Lead

Triumphant in their first starts in the Junior Baseball League, the classy Arrows and Unions meet Sunday at Renfrew Park and leadership of the league will be at stake. The game will start at 3.00 p.m.

Both Arrows and Unions copped their triumphs against the Maple Leafs, Arrows winning by a 5-1 score and the Unions belting the Leaflets for a 10-5 margin.

It was thought at first, owing to their very few practices, the Unions would be the problem children of the league. However, judging on their first start last Wednesday, the Unions promise to give a good account of themselves.

Soldier Thomas is expected to start Hawkey on the mound. Hawkey is the young Barrhead flinger who turned in such a good performance in an exhibition game.

Either Billy Lupul or "Specks" MacDonald will start for the Unions with Johnny Lupul completing the battery for the Redshirts.

Royal Thumping

Crusaders handed the Clover Bar Royals a royal thumping in a Bantam Soccer League fixture at the Bennett school grounds last night, winning by a 10-0 count. Douglas Paton did the bulk of the thumping by scoring eight goals himself. The other two were scored by Gawthorn and Cecil Cramer.

WHEN "CHOO-CHOOS" WENT MODERN

Remember how we marvelled at the first streamlined locomotive with its sleek racy lines that presaged new speed, new comfort, new travel efficiency? Certainly the old "iron horse" isn't what she used to be!

It's the same with cigars. Just about the time the "choo-choos" went modern, the White Owl "Streamline" made its bow to the public and a very welcome salaam it was. The shapely, graceful "Streamline" has since become a general favourite, and no wonder. It looks well in the hand and it's a grand smoke!

There's "LIGHTWEIGHT TAILORING"

Lightweight tailoring is not achieved by leaving something out. It is achieved, rather, by expert handling of the essentials that are put in. In this way, you keep weight down, but the suit retains its ability to hold its shape and its lines, precisely as a year-'round suit does. To obtain this lightweight tailoring in our summer suits is an uncommon thing to find in clothing at anywhere near the price of a LaFleche Bros. suit.

When you realize that we can tailor for you a really good suit at $35.00, the value of this investment will be apparent to you.

PAT O'DOWDY ROUTS JOHNSON TO RETAIN BELT

Pin, Ropes Other Tricks Help Champ

By JACK DEAKIN

CHAMPION Patrick O'Dowdy strutted like a peacock into the Memorial Hall ring last night, a-wearin' the silver belt. A bolder, even prouder O'Dowdy stomped out of the ring, still wearing his coveted jewelry and triumphant against Gus Johnson in two-of-three-falls.

It was the main event bout on Promoter Mike Cutcher's wrestling card. It was also O'Dowdy's second successful defence of his silver belt. His first was graced by fortune as Johnson weighed in over the weight limit.

O'Dowdy had many weapons and methods in his winning stand. Pat's most vicious weapon was a mere bent pin. That pin was as much to Pat as Sir Galahad's sword was to the famed knight. Annahoo Patrick jabbed his way out of the tough spots with his miniature sabre while he often sought the sanctity of the ropes, his most cherished haven of rest and safety.

NO GENTLEMAN

Many people thought Pat no gentleman. Frankly though the many tricks Pat pulled off were not the sportive gestures so often seen on the cricket pitch. Indeed the irate ones in a frenzied crowd booed O'Dowdy lustily, and definitely you couldn't call Patrick a popular winner.

But booes (no z in there) mean nothing to O'Dowdy. Despite these unpleasant warblings, he tore through the mob, his chest puffed up several sizes above normal and his booming voice issuing a challenge to all.

And Patrick fought an uphill battle as he retained his silver waistband. The bout started with a wild flurry of action. It was not until the 10-minute mark that O'Dowdy found need for the pin, but when he did he promptly jabbed it into Johnson, who at once took off with a wild shriek. Once that pin near lost Patrick his panties for a wild spectator nearly ripped the tights off Pat to find it. You guessed correctly—said fan beat a hasty retreat.

EDGE FOR A TIME

Johnson had the edge for the most part. His crushing body slams took their toll and Pat was prone for a press within 15 minutes.

The big, rough Irishman came back bitterly in the second heat and his arm-breaker had Johnson tenderly whispering "Uncle."

Now at this point of the bout the excitement was as hot as the noon day sun can be in any other place but Alberta. The time limit was near and many had called the joust a draw when Patrick whipped over his opponent and bent the Johnson body with a Boston Crab. The hold was too much for Johnson and his challenging efforts went for nought.

Soldier Thomas had Lady Luck smiling on him as affectionately as the gorgeous blonde sitting in section "C" ringside. Thomas failed to pin Bob "Bad Boy" Cummings' shoulders to the mat but he won a torrid semi-windup with the only fall of the bout. The fall was awarded him by Referee Gordon Grayson.

Cummings, at his age, should know that crime does not pay.

It certainly didn't pay him dividends for his gouging and kicking simply led him to the pitfalls of defeat. But it was one of the hottest things of the wrestling season and made one forget completely the wintery blast outdoors.

Ralph Loeffler opened up with winning parade as he felled Graham Nelson in a one-fall curtain raiser. This too had much for the fans and rounded out a card which kept you constantly quivering with goose-pimples—or worse.

Franciscans Swamp Bombers By 28-7

Showing far too much hitting power for their rivals to cope with Franciscans defeated Bombers by the one-sided score of 28-7 in a Y.M.C.A. senior softball league game played at Coronation Park Friday night.

No less than seven home runs boomed from the Franciscan bats as they piled up their big total. The four-ply swatters were Delmar, with three, and Griffith, Hall, McKe[illegible] and K[illegible] with one each. Thompson, of Bombers, got that team's only homer with three on base.

Batteries: Franciscans, Griffith and Tougas; Bombers, Henderson and Malay.

Council Gets Report On New Proposal for Softening City Water

Municipal softening of Edmonton water would increase water costs to the average family of five approximately $1.78 a year but would cut the soap bill by $4.14 a year according to an estimate by W. R. Mount, superintendent of the city waterworks department.

Members of city council at present are studying a report by Mr. Mount on the feasibility of softening city water. The report was made at the request of Ald. A. Blair Paterson who said he believed substantial benefits would be made to householders.

RATINGS

[illegible]

There are two ways of softening municipal water supplies, Mr. Mount said. First is chemical treatment by adding lime to remove carbonate hardness and adding soda ash where necessary to remove sulphate hardness.

[illegible]

IMPROVED METHODS

[illegible]

Has Plan

ALD. A. BLAIR PATERSON

[illegible]

Savings would be less soap requirements, less harm to fabrics during washing, less heat losses in hot water ... and heaters owing to reduction of scaling and less expense in operation of steam boilers. The last item is an industrial factor only.

DOGS

by P. Hamilton Goodsell

ANIMAL HOSPITALS

Not long ago the term "animal hospital" implied only a barn or, at best, some room in his home which a veterinarian had equipped with a few cages where he could care for a limited number of ailing dogs or cats. Beyond the fact that such an arrangement enabled the practitioner to keep his patients under his eye, such "hospitals" had none of the latest scientific aids which, in the field of veterinary medicine might be comparable to those found in institutions devoted to the cure of human ills.

With the advance of veterinary science, however, all this has changed until now there are, throughout the land, any number of hospitals for animal care, completely equipped. In them the most delicate and complex operations are performed with the latest methods of sterilization by skilled practitioners with the highest degree of safety and the utmost humane kindness. The high-powered microscope and X-ray are in common use, and elaborate methods of diagnosis involving chemical, microscopic, and bacteriological tests as well as physical examination, auscultation, and percussion are employed.

$108,000,000 SPENT ON DOGS

It is estimated that to feed the fifteen million dogs in the country costs a hundred million dollars a year, and that dog owners spend in addition another eight million annually for medicins, antispectics, cleansing powders, soaps, etc.

Our Boarding House Major Hoople

SOMETHING SURELY HAS HAPPENED TO ALVIN AND AMOS— I HOPE THEY'RE NOT HIKING HOME IN THIS STORM! THEY SHOULD HAVE BEEN BACK FROM FARLEY'S FALLS LONG AGO— IT'S ONLY FIVE MILES, AND THEY STARTED AT SIX THIS MORNING!
DON'T WORRY, MRS. HOOPLE! THE MAJOR'S NOSE WORKS LIKE A COMPASS AT NIGHT TIME! HE'S TOO BIG TO FALL DOWN A MANHOLE, AND HE COULD TALK HIS WAY OUT OF A TORNADO!
YOU KNOW HOW THE MAJOR IS — HE'S PROBABLY TAKING TIME OUT TO TELL ALVIN ABOUT WHEN HE WENT OVER NIAGARA IN A CANOE!
THIS IS SWELL STEW, BUT SUPPER AIN'T THE SAME WITHOUT ALVIN AN' THE MAJOR— NO SPIRIT OF COMPETITION!
THE NIGHT IS DARK AND THEY ARE FAR FROM HOME—

WOMEN ESCAPE AS AUTO HITS C. N. R. TRAIN

Mrs. S. P. Coyne, 11044 83 street, and Mrs. Rita McKay, 11046 83 street, were admitted to the Royal Alexandra Hospital Friday afternoon for treatment for bruises and shock received when their auto crashed into the side of a C.N.R. train at the Oliver crossing on the Fort Trail. It was reported that neither of the women was seriously injured. The car was badly damaged.

Through The Mill

"Many, pity women," wrote the poet, and everybody, including the women themselves, have been pitying the daughters of Eve ever since. But it is high time there was another suffragette movement—this time for equality for men. At least that is the way a man who appeared in police court Saturday felt about it.

• • •

After several years of constant warfare he just moved out on his wife and left her the kitchen door to lecture to. Unfortunately he didn't leave her much else in the kitchen and when the supplies ran out she went to the police and charged him with non-support.

• • •

Accused just refused to make any arrangements for her support. So the court finally had to sentence him to jail for 60 days. "It will be quiet there anyway—peaceful," the man mumbled as he was led away.

Edmonton Creche Society will meet in the Macdonald hotel Monday at 3 p.m.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
by William Ferguson
The TIGER SWALLOW-TAIL
IS ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR AND BEST KNOWN BUTTERFLIES IN THE UNITED STATES! THERE ARE A NUMBER OF GROUPS IN THE SWALLOW-TAIL FAMILY... AND ALL ARE NAMED FOR THE LONG, TRAILING TAILS ON THEIR HIND WINGS.
COPR. 1939 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.
BIRDS SHY AWAY FROM THE TIGER SWALLOW-TAIL IN ITS CATERPILLAR STAGE, FOR IT WEARS LARGE, STARING EYE-SPOTS, WHICH GIVE IT A SNAKE-LIKE APPEARANCE.
AFTER THE CATERPILLAR GROWS FULL SIZE, IT SPINS A SILK GIRDLE, AND SO PLACES ITSELF THAT, WHEN IT CHANGES TO THE CHRYSALIS STAGE, THE GIRDLE HOLDS IT IN PLACE.
WINTER IS SPENT IN THE DORMANT PUPAL STAGE... ONE OF THE MOST AMAZING OF NATURE'S ACHIEVEMENTS.
THE TIGER SWALLOW-TAIL WEARS BOTH THE COLORS AND MARKING OF A TIGER... HENCE ITS NAME.
ALL MALES OF THE SPECIES ARE ALIKE, BUT, DUE TO SOME QUIRK OF MOTHER NATURE, THERE ARE TWO COLOR PHASES AMONG THE FEMALES. ABOVE ARE SHOWN THE TWO TYPES.
WHEN SPRING COMES, THE SWALLOW-TAILS EMERGE FROM THEIR PUPAL CASES, SHORTLY TO LAY MORE EGGS... TO HATCH MORE CATERPILLARS.

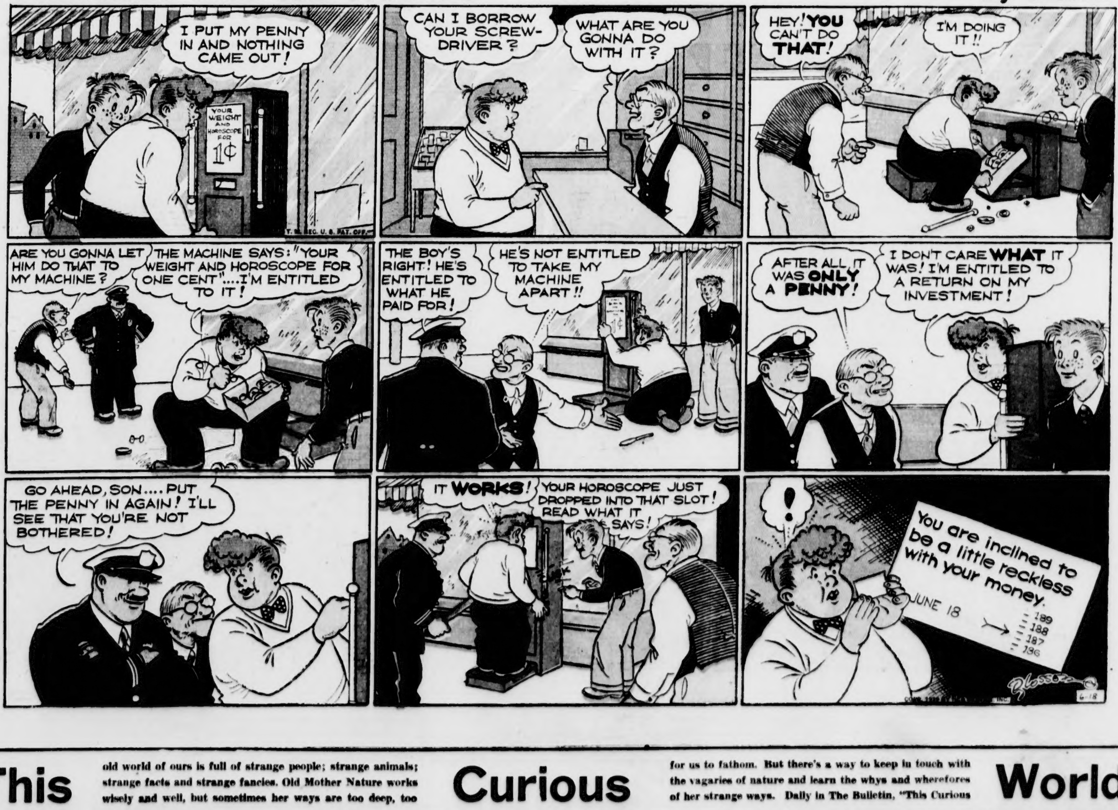
FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

By Blosser



I PUT MY PENNY IN AND NOTHING CAME OUT!
YOUR WEIGHT AND HOROSCOPE FOR 1¢
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
CAN I BORROW YOUR SCREW-DRIVER?
WHAT ARE YOU GONNA DO WITH IT?
HEY! YOU CAN'T DO THAT!
I'M DOING IT!!
ARE YOU GONNA LET HIM DO THAT TO MY MACHINE?
THE MACHINE SAYS: "YOUR WEIGHT AND HOROSCOPE FOR ONE CENT"....I'M ENTITLED TO IT!
THE BOY'S RIGHT! HE'S ENTITLED TO WHAT HE PAID FOR!
HE'S NOT ENTITLED TO TAKE MY MACHINE APART!!
AFTER ALL, IT WAS ONLY A PENNY!
I DON'T CARE WHAT IT WAS! I'M ENTITLED TO A RETURN ON MY INVESTMENT!
GO AHEAD, SON.... PUT THE PENNY IN AGAIN! I'LL SEE THAT YOU'RE NOT BOTHERED!
IT WORKS!
YOUR HOROSCOPE JUST DROPPED INTO THAT SLOT! READ WHAT IT SAYS!
You are inclined to be a little reckless with your money.
